OUR POLICY

We will not make a pin of questionable taste either in shape or message. Each design is unique in that no one else will be able to use your die.

At random intervals we will publish the lists of the pin designs, quantities, colors, and metals. Also available will be the names and addresses of the individuals who own the pins. Because this will create a collectors' market, you are encouraged to limit your quantities to 100-200 pins of one design or color; i.e., you may create one design but have color variations of the same design. Instead of having 500 colored pins of the same design, you could have one pin of the same design but five different color combinations of 100 each. An exception could be a one-event pin such as a conclave or a special outing. Of course you may order as many pins as you like; but remember, rarity is a function of quantity.

Regarding the lists to be published, along with the size, color, content, and quantity will be the name and address of the owner and his desires as to whether he wishes to sell, trade, or give away his objects of art. At any rate, the barter will be made with the owner by mail.

In a sense, the booklet will be a "Who's Who" in the angling pin world. Many of the owners will also be signing the back of the pins with engravers.

When it comes down to design rights, it is obvious that no one person can have an exclusive right to a design of nature or the outline of a state or a simple reel, etc. But since all great minds travel in similar channels, and fly fishermen have great minds, I can foresee some problems of similar designs. However, we will do our best to reduce bloodshed.

In the following dissertation on design, please don't get lost or discouraged. If worse comes to worse, I'll help you with your layout.

Let's start with the back design. The fasteners available are: 1. A safety pin type back; 2. Tie tack; 3. Butterfly clutch type of tie tack. Numbers 1 and 3 are no charge. Number 2 is 15 cents per pin extra. Number 1 is the most reliable, and number 3 is the most unreliable. Number 2 is too bulky for a hat band.

Now to the business side of the coin. What is cloisonne? It is simply heat fired porcelain ( $900^{\circ}$  C) in which each color is separated from its neighbor by a band of metal. The band is actually a part of the base metal of the back (copper which is later plated).

The manufacture of these pins is rather complex. First, the die is cut from steel using your design. Second, the die is used to stamp the basic pin out of a sheet of pure copper. Then the proper colors are added to the appropriate areas with a small brush. The pin is then fired in an oven at  $900^{\circ}$  C. At this point the excess porcelain is ground back to the level of the metal outline of the design. After the grinding process, the pin is glazed again at  $900^{\circ}$  C. and the back attached. Finally, all exposed metal is plated, and the pin is finished.

With this understanding it is easy to see that:

- Letters that are to be colored must be bounded by metal or the colors would flow together.
- 2. Metallic letters will appear solid in the design, i.e., black.
- 3. Colored letters must be hollow letters.
- All areas receiving colors must be completely bounded by metal and be separated from surrounding areas.
- 5. All designs must have a metal rim or edge. A word of caution. As with any good porcelain object, don't allow the pins to bang together. They will chip. Don't drop on an edge. They will chip. Protect and cherish them. Thirty years from now they will be trading for many hundreds of dollars for the big names and far more than expected for the others. Remember, they are limited editions.

Now on to the design. All designs must be drawn 3 to 5 times their true size. Five times is best. A one-inch pin will be drawn 3 to 5 inches in size. You will be tempted to fill this huge space with all sorts of goodies; but remember, it will be reduced to final size. The smallest area that can receive color is about a 1 mm square (which at 5 times would appear as 5 mm or almost 1/4 inch square). The rim should be 2 mm at 3 to 5 times. The shape of the design may be any shape, regular or irregular. You are not restricted to circles and squares. IN THE DRAWING, ALL LINES (BLACK) WILL REPRODUCE AS METAL. DON'T COLOR THE ORIGINAL DRAWING. Color a copy. Note: It is very important that all designs or copies must be on white paper.

On selecting your colors, send me color chips colored with magic markers or paint chips from paint stores. I will match them as closely as possible. Some colors are available in a transparent/metallic rendition. Indicate if they are desired, and I'll try to hit it as closely as possible. These transparent colors are really dazzling! Remember, don't color the original. Color a copy and send both.

The size of the pin is determined by its longest dimension.

The minimum order is 100 pins. Each color in excess of three will be charged at the rate of 3.00 per color per 100. A 30.00 die charge is a one-time charge for each size and shape. On a reorder where the colors are the same or changed but the size and shape are unchanged, there will be no additional die charge.

If you feel that you would rather have us design your pin according to your guidelines, we will be glad to do so for a fee of $30.00-$45.00.

We will modify your drawing (lettering, etc.) for a fee of $20.00 to $30.00. Minor modifications will be routinely performed on a no charge basis.

Sizes available are 3/4" to 2-1/4", but 1" to 1-1/4" are the most popular. If you desire a different size or quantity above 100, write for a quotation. Die charges vary above 1-1/4 inch and on special relief dies of all sizes.

Michigan residents add 4% sales tax.

Delivery time is about 8 weeks, so order well in advance. On a special event pin, I will require 12 weeks advance notice. Regarding payment, the full amount is due with the order, and we pay the postage.

In using a hackle as part of the design, it is impossible to outline the fibers with metal. It results in a gross mess. In figure 1 are the ways of using hackle with a color background. Remember, all black is the plated metal. If a person insists on hackle flies, the silhouette may be engraved in the metal and then filled with color. In this case the dominant color of the pin is then silver or gold.

It is best to let the hook proper be represented by the plated metal. It would look too bulky as black outlined with metal unless very large, as with a salmon fly. In the engraved fly mentioned above, that hook area can be filled with black enamel. In using the plated lines as part of your design, remember, nickel plating will either be grey or black, depending on the reflections; and gold will be either yellow or dull grey for the same reason.

Once again, these are just ideas. If your design isn't possible, I'll let you know before it's too late.

Why Pins for Clubs

1. They cost less than patches.

They can be worn where patches cannot.
 They're great for shadow box display.

4. Pins can be signed; patches cannot.

5. Pins can be worn over patches of the national organization.

6. Many pins can be worn on a hat.

- Instant national recognition for your club through the listing in the "Book of Pins".
- 8. Create profit through member sales.

Why Pins for Individuals

1. Same as 1 through 6 above.

2. Create original art for yourself.

3. Tradeable and saleable through the "Book of Pins" listing.

A way of sharing by giving or trading pins with fishing companions.
 Due to rarity, your pins will be collected on a nationwide basis.
 Your design is yours alone.

Why Pins for Businesses

1. Original reasons again.

2. May be used as gifts to good customers.

Trades can create interesting wall displays.
 National advertising in the "Book of Pins".

Why a Pin for a National or Regional Meeting

1. Numbers 1 through 7 again.

2. A great fund raiser.

A pin will be more rare in the long run than a pin of club origin if it is a one-time creation of 300-500.

A final note on the "Book of Pins". In the early stages the lists will be in the form of a newsletter. At the 100 design count, the form will change to a booklet with a periodic issuing of newsletters to update the lists. At the 300 count, we will publish a hard bound book with previous supplements until it's time for Volume II and so on.

As you can see, your design and name of ownership will become a part of angling literature. The book will also create an instant market, for 100 pins are not going to go very far. Wouldn't it be nice to have a Halford or a Gordon pin that had been signed? What would it be worth today? The collecting of these pins is different than any angling memorabilia ever offered in the past. They are a personal art form. If signed, then they are more personal.

One fellow was heard to say that collecting pins was going to be a lot of enjoyment and a lot cheaper than bamboo.

Prices are subject to change without notice due to the changing economy.

THE VIEW FROM BAKER'S HOLE

In February, in New England where I live, when the days are as gray as a mouse and filled with snow or rain, or both, and the world is either too much with me, or too little, I often shut my eyes to the surrounding bleakness, pack my imaginary bags, and, faster than you can say "Walter Mitty", I'm off (once again) to a place called Baker's Hole.

If you know Baker's Hole, you'll know why I often choose to return in my daydreams to this particular place. If you don't know Baker's Hole, let me tell you a little bit about it.

Officially, Baker's Hole is the name of the small, wooded Gallatin National Forest Service campground located on a bend in the Madison River just downstream from where the river leaves Yellowstone Park and just three miles north of the town of West Yellowstone, Montana, on Hwy. 191. Unofficially, Baker's Hole is also the name of a "hole" in the river (there are only two) as it flows past the campground on its way to Hebgen Lake, just a few miles downstream.

Historically, or traditionally, Baker's Hole takes its name, I've been told, from an old beaver trapper named Baker, who "holed" up here sometime back in the last century. Beavers still abound here, as do many other animals, and on snowy nights in late October, when I may be the only camper in the area, I often think of Baker, and of the many others, met and unmet, who have, for one reason or another, made this wooded spot their temporary home. But that, as they say, is another story.

Baker's Hole is many things to me: place, people, history, memories, speculations. And trout. Above all, trout.

Trout fishing, in fact, is the main reason why I drive the 2,354 miles from my home in Boston and why this campground becomes then the very center of my summer and autumn universe, my home in the woods away from my home in the city, the one place on earth to which I (and current cat) return year after year. To fish what in my estimation are the best and certainly the most interesting trout waters that this or any country has to offer.

And as I sit at my bench tying up next year's supply of flies or wait in my cab for the next fare, or, for that matter, right now, here in my kitchen, it's easy to return in my mind to my green, lopsided tent pitched on the river's edge.

It's early in the morning, cool, and there's a mist on the river. Some small trout, or perhaps whitefish, are rising to a tiny grey speckled mayfly and just downstream a beaver pokes among the willows along the far bank. My cat is sitting under a tree and licking at a paw. In the distance I can see the mountains over by Hebgen Lake. Music to my eyes. All's right with the world. I feed the cat and go back to sleep.

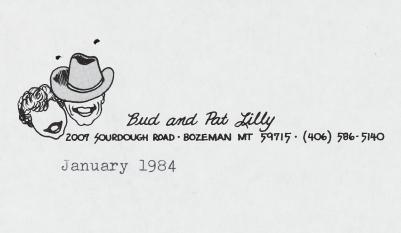

This is summer, July or August, and a time for sleeping late. Long experience has taught me that fishing on this stretch of the Madison is best in the early afternoon when the hoppers become most active or else early in the evening when the caddis flies begin to surface and take wing. At this time I'll probably walk upstream along the path (being careful not to step into a muskrat hole, of which there are many); and as I walk (I seldom wade upstream in this stretch) I'll cast just ahead of me, fishing close to the bank with a pheasant hopper. If I'm careful, I'll catch several two- or three-pound browns, and many smaller trout. When the sun begins to set and the fish lose interest in the hopper, I'll switch to a caddis pupa imitation and work my way back downstream, swinging the fly in the current as I go, a method I've found very effective, not only just before the actual hatch, but during it as well. If I want dry-fly action, though, I'll tie on a small Elk Hair Caddis with an olive body. There aren't many mayflies in this stretch of river, except for the small baetis, which, I've found, tends to bring up to the surface large numbers of whitefish and relatively few trout. These three flies, then -- a pheasant hopper, a caddis pupa (in olive or gray), and an Elk Hair Caddis -- will serve me many a summer's day on this part of the river. I don't always fish this same stretch of river, of course; I often go farther afield. But, really, not much farther; there's no need. A few miles upstream and to the East lies the water known as the Madison in the Park (from Madison Junction down to where it leaves the Park boundary at Baker's Hole). To the West and a half hour's drive from Baker's Hole, there's the Lower Madison (downstream from Quake Lake), a spectacular rainbow fishery on which one could spend an entire summer without becoming bored. Within an hour's slow drive from Baker's Hole, I can drive into the Park and fish the Firehold, the Nez Pierce, the Gibbon. Just a little farther into the Park there's the Yellowstone for challenging cutthroat fishing and Slough Creek, one of the few rivers on which I've had spectacular success fishing a skating spider. To the West of Baker's Hole, just over Targhee Pass, through the range of mountains that divide this part of Montana from Idaho, lies the Henry's Fork of the Snake, one of the most interesting and challenging rivers in the world. To the North of Baker's Hole, along Hwy. 191, is the Gallatin, a beautiful freestone river that runs through meadows and between picturesque canyon walls, and where I once caught a twelve-pound brown. - 2 -

If I decide one day to get up early for a change, I might also drive a few miles over to Hebgen Lake for a morning's bout with the "gulpers", rainbows (usually) that sip at the surface for small mayflies (callibaetis usually). I don't do this very often because, frankly, it's quite addictive, and I really do enjoy sleeping late. In addition to these well-known spots there are in the area dozens of smaller and quite excellent creeks, and beaver ponds as well, to be found and fished by the adventurous fisherman. As the days begin to shorten and summer edges into autumn (or winter, take your pick), the nature of the fishing begins to change on the Madison near Baker's Hole and I find myself fishing closer and closer to "home". Usually in September and certainly by early October the air temperature drops, sometimes drastically (one mid-October morning last Fall, I woke up to find the temperature at -5, and that was inside my tent). There are a lot more fish in the river now, most of them browns that have come up from Hebgen Lake to spawn, but with many rainbows following. It's relatively easy to tell the new arrivals from the resident river trout, for the fish just up from the lake will generally be brighter and more silvery, and lack the deeper flesh tones of the river-bred or resident trout. (Nearing November and closer to spawning time, the browns will, of course, take on more color). At this time of year, I know that my chances for consistent success will be enhanced many fold if I remember just two things: First: Just as the coloration differs, so also do the feeding habits of the new arrivals. For the first few weeks in the river, the spawning brown will, at best, feed only erratically, and hardly at all when on the redds. The rainbows, on the other hand, are quite active feeders, perhaps more so in the river than in the lake, as there is far less food in the river. Second: Given the different feeding habits of the two species of trout, I must remember to use tactics and flies that are most likely to appeal to the different trout at this time. What works best on rainbows (and whitefish, for that matter) may frequently not work at all on browns. And, often, vice versa. It's as simple, and as complex, as that. Following, in summary, are what might be called "Lessons Learned at Baker's Hole", observations that may prove helpful in explaining the above generalizations and aid the fisherman in his pursuit. FEEDING HABITS As already noted, rainbows feed quite actively in the Fall, browns far less. Browns are, however, more territorial and aggressive than rainbows. For consistent success with spawners, - 3 -

it is this instinct that should be appealed to when fishing for them, rather than a "match the hatch" approach. FLY CHOICE Far more browns than rainbows will be caught if you fish with a streamer; if you fish with a nymph at this time of year, the reverse is true. This is because browns are more aggressive and territorial. FLY COLOR Very important. I've experimented a lot with differentcolored streamers and have found that different species have certain color preferences (at least when it comes to streamers). For browns, the most productive colors are (in descending order): yellow, brown, black, and white. The order, interesting enough, is reversed for rainbows: white, black, brown, and yellow. Far more rainbows than browns, for instance, will be caught with a Light Spruce or a White Marabou, and far more browns than rainbows when using a Yellow Marabou or a Muddler Minnow. On any given day and with individual fish this may not hold true, but I think you'll find the observation holds over a period of time. FLY ACTION Browns are often excited, or challenged, by a fast-moving fly; rainbows prefer a dead-drift or a relatively slowly-moving fly. If you want to catch more rainbows than browns, dead-drift a nymph or fish a streamer fairly slowly. For the browns, use a streamer and fish it fairly fast. DEPTH At this time of year, rainbows prefer the really deep water, browns the shallower stretches. I would fish accordingly, with a nymph dead-drifted right along the bottom for rainbows, and for browns, with a streamer relatively close to the surface. SIZE OF FLY Most streamers are considered large flies, but within this category, a brown, I've found, will generally be more willing to take a larger streamer than will a rainbow. For the brown, the upper practical fishing limit would be a 1/0 (or a six-inch fly), while for the rainbows, the upper limit would be a size 2 (or a four-inch fly). On some days a fish will be frightened by a really large fly; at other times only a really large fly seems to work consistently. Experiment with the different sizes. The most useful sizes will be #2 and #4. SPOOKINESS Feeding rainbows are far more easily spooked than spawning browns. If both species are present in a certain run, fish for the rainbows first with a nymph; then go back and cover the same water with a streamer for the browns. This is quite practical advice, for I've found that the commotion of a fighting brown will often spook the rainbows for a considerable period of time, whereas the opposite is not generally observed. The above are just some of the lessons I've learned at Baker's Hole. There are, of course, many more, and someday when time and space permit, I hope to share some of them with you. Just the other day, while sitting in my cab in front of one of Boston's larger hotels, I, just out of curiosity, counted up the days I've spent tenting at Baker's Hole. I was surprised when the total came out to almost two years. That's a lot of time to spend out in the woods, but the figure pales in comparison to the number of delightful hours I've spent dreaming or thinking about the place. I'll be back next year, I know. And the year after. You come, too. You won't be disappointed. Especially written for The Western Rivers Club members by Jack Gartside.

Dear Member;

We are concluding our first year as the Western Rivers Club. It has really been fun for Pat and I. We hope you too have found club promises to come up to your expectations and the information and materials we have provided you with to be interesting, informative and helpful.

Montana, Idaho and Wyoming have always had the reputation of being prime trout fishing country. They have however, suffered from liberal fishing limits, bait fishing in excess of what trout populations would permit, industrial, agricultural stream pollution, poor forestry practices and land uses. This is being corrected now.

The improvement in many trout streams is becoming evident by the increase in angler use. There are a number of streams that are becoming fine fisheries as a result of mine and mill closings, better land use practices and special fishing regulations.

It is one of our goals in the coming years to monitor these streams and keep you informed.

Another trend we see in fisheries management is to improve the quality and quantity of trout in lakes and reservoirs. Not only will this provide more exciting fishing, but also take pressure off the streams.

In any event, we're optomistic about the angling future in these western waters and we hope you will renew your club membership to allow us to share it with you too. A renewal application is enclosed.

Cordially;

Bud and Pat

THE VIEW FROM BAKER'S HOLE

In February, in New England where I live, when the days are as gray as a mouse and filled with snow or rain, or both, and the world is either too much with me, or too little, I often shut my eyes to the surrounding bleakness, pack my imaginary bags, and, faster than you can say "Walter Mitty", I'm off (once again) to a place called Baker's Hole.

If you know Baker's Hole, you'll know why I often choose to return in my daydreams to this particular place. If you don't know Baker's Hole, let me tell you a little bit about it.

Officially, Baker's Hole is the name of the small, wooded Gallatin National Forest Service campground located on a bend in the Madison River just downstream from where the river leaves Yellowstone Park and just three miles north of the town of West Yellowstone, Montana, on Hwy. 191. Unofficially, Baker's Hole is also the name of a "hole" in the river (there are only two) as it flows past the campground on its way to Hebgen Lake, just a few miles downstream.

Historically, or traditionally, Baker's Hole takes its name, I've been told, from an old beaver trapper named Baker, who "holed" up here sometime back in the last century. Beavers still abound here, as do many other animals, and on snowy nights in late October, when I may be the only camper in the area, I often think of Baker, and of the many others, met and unmet, who have, for one reason or another, made this wooded spot their temporary home. But that, as they say, is another story.

Baker's Hole is many things to me: place, people, history, memories, speculations. And trout. Above all, trout.

Trout fishing, in fact, is the main reason why I drive the 2,354 miles from my home in Boston and why this campground becomes then the very center of my summer and autumn universe, my home in the woods away from my home in the city, the one place on earth to which I (and current cat) return year after year. To fish what in my estimation are the best and certainly the most interesting trout waters that this or any country has to offer.

And as I sit at my bench tying up next year's supply of flies or wait in my cab for the next fare, or, for that matter, right now, here in my kitchen, it's easy to return in my mind to my green, lopsided tent pitched on the river's edge.

It's early in the morning, cool, and there's a mist on the river. Some small trout, or perhaps whitefish, are rising to a tiny grey speckled mayfly and just downstream a beaver pokes among the willows along the far bank. My cat is sitting under a tree and licking at a paw. In the distance I can see the mountains over by Hebgen Lake. Music to my eyes. All's right with the world. I feed the cat and go back to sleep.

This is summer, July or August, and a time for sleeping late. Long experience has taught me that fishing on this stretch of the Madison is best in the early afternoon when the hoppers become most active or else early in the evening when the caddis flies begin to surface and take wing. At this time I'll probably walk upstream along the path (being careful not to step into a muskrat hole, of which there are many); and as I walk (I seldom wade upstream in this stretch) I'll cast just ahead of me, fishing close to the bank with a pheasant hopper. If I'm careful, I'll catch several two- or three-pound browns, and many smaller trout. When the sun begins to set and the fish lose interest in the hopper, I'll switch to a caddis pupa imitation and work my way back downstream, swinging the fly in the current as I go, a method I've found very effective, not only just before the actual hatch, but during it as well. If I want dry-fly action, though, I'll tie on a small Elk Hair Caddis with an olive body. There aren't many mayflies in this stretch of river, except for the small baetis, which, I've found, tends to bring up to the surface large numbers of whitefish and relatively few trout. These three flies, then -- a pheasant hopper, a caddis pupa (in olive or gray), and an Elk Hair Caddis -- will serve me many a summer's day on this part of the river. I don't always fish this same stretch of river, of course; I often go farther afield. But, really, not much farther; there's no need. A few miles upstream and to the East lies the water known as the Madison in the Park (from Madison Junction down to where it leaves the Park boundary at Baker's Hole). To the West and a half hour's drive from Baker's Hole, there's the Lower Madison (downstream from Quake Lake), a spectacular rainbow fishery on which one could spend an entire summer without becoming bored. Within an hour's slow drive from Baker's Hole, I can drive into the Park and fish the Firehold, the Nez Pierce, the Gibbon. Just a little farther into the Park there's the Yellowstone for challenging cutthroat fishing and Slough Creek, one of the few rivers on which I've had spectacular success fishing a skating spider. To the West of Baker's Hole, just over Targhee Pass, through the range of mountains that divide this part of Montana from Idaho, lies the Henry's Fork of the Snake, one of the most interesting and challenging rivers in the world. To the North of Baker's Hole, along Hwy. 191, is the Gallatin, a beautiful freestone river that runs through meadows and between picturesque canyon walls, and where I once caught a twelve-pound brown. - 2 -

If I decide one day to get up early for a change, I might also drive a few miles over to Hebgen Lake for a morning's bout with the "gulpers", rainbows (usually) that sip at the surface for small mayflies (callibaetis usually). I don't do this very often because, frankly, it's quite addictive, and I really do enjoy sleeping late. In addition to these well-known spots there are in the area dozens of smaller and quite excellent creeks, and beaver ponds as well, to be found and fished by the adventurous fisherman. As the days begin to shorten and summer edges into autumn (or winter, take your pick), the nature of the fishing begins to change on the Madison near Baker's Hole and I find myself fishing closer and closer to "home". Usually in September and certainly by early October the air temperature drops, sometimes drastically (one mid-October morning last Fall, I woke up to find the temperature at -5, and that was inside my tent). There are a lot more fish in the river now, most of them browns that have come up from Hebgen Lake to spawn, but with many rainbows following. It's relatively easy to tell the new arrivals from the resident river trout, for the fish just up from the lake will generally be brighter and more silvery, and lack the deeper flesh tones of the river-bred or resident trout. (Nearing November and closer to spawning time, the browns will, of course, take on more color). At this time of year, I know that my chances for consistent success will be enhanced many fold if I remember just two things: First: Just as the coloration differs, so also do the feeding habits of the new arrivals. For the first few weeks in the river, the spawning brown will, at best, feed only erratically, and hardly at all when on the redds. The rainbows, on the other hand, are quite active feeders, perhaps more so in the river than in the lake, as there is far less food in the river. Second: Given the different feeding habits of the two species of trout, I must remember to use tactics and flies that are most likely to appeal to the different trout at this time. What works best on rainbows (and whitefish, for that matter) may frequently not work at all on browns. And, often, vice versa. It's as simple, and as complex, as that. Following, in summary, are what might be called "Lessons Learned at Baker's Hole", observations that may prove helpful in explaining the above generalizations and aid the fisherman in his pursuit. FEEDING HABITS As already noted, rainbows feed quite actively in the Fall, browns far less. Browns are, however, more territorial and aggressive than rainbows. For consistent success with spawners, - 3 -

it is this instinct that should be appealed to when fishing for them, rather than a "match the hatch" approach. FLY CHOICE Far more browns than rainbows will be caught if you fish with a streamer; if you fish with a nymph at this time of year, the reverse is true. This is because browns are more aggressive and territorial. FLY COLOR Very important. I've experimented a lot with differentcolored streamers and have found that different species have certain color preferences (at least when it comes to streamers). For browns, the most productive colors are (in descending order): yellow, brown, black, and white. The order, interesting enough, is reversed for rainbows: white, black, brown, and yellow. Far more rainbows than browns, for instance, will be caught with a Light Spruce or a White Marabou, and far more browns than rainbows when using a Yellow Marabou or a Muddler Minnow. On any given day and with individual fish this may not hold true, but I think you'll find the observation holds over a period of time. FLY ACTION Browns are often excited, or challenged, by a fast-moving fly; rainbows prefer a dead-drift or a relatively slowly-moving fly. If you want to catch more rainbows than browns, dead-drift a nymph or fish a streamer fairly slowly. For the browns, use a streamer and fish it fairly fast. DEPTH At this time of year, rainbows prefer the really deep water, browns the shallower stretches. I would fish accordingly, with a nymph dead-drifted right along the bottom for rainbows, and for browns, with a streamer relatively close to the surface. SIZE OF FLY Most streamers are considered large flies, but within this category, a brown, I've found, will generally be more willing to take a larger streamer than will a rainbow. For the brown, the upper practical fishing limit would be a 1/0 (or a six-inch fly), while for the rainbows, the upper limit would be a size 2 (or a four-inch fly). On some days a fish will be frightened by a really large fly; at other times only a really large fly seems to work consistently. Experiment with the different sizes. The most useful sizes will be #2 and #4. SPOOKINESS Feeding rainbows are far more easily spooked than spawning browns. If both species are present in a certain run, fish for the rainbows first with a nymph; then go back and cover the same - 4 -

water with a streamer for the browns. This is quite practical advice, for I've found that the commotion of a fighting brown will often spook the rainbows for a considerable period of time, whereas the opposite is not generally observed. The above are just some of the lessons I've learned at Baker's Hole. There are, of course, many more, and someday when time and space permit, I hope to share some of them with you. Spring 1982 Edition

The Country Traveler, Brookside, N.J. 07926

When we lived in Vermont the weatherman on our local radio station used to say, "spring travels 45 miles a day." With no further explanation, that enigmatic statement brought to mind a search for the "beginning" of spring, and the journey we could take, following its path at the leisurely pace of forty-five miles per day. Our fantasy, of course, included the discovery of a new country inn at every stop. Well, our dream is coming closer to reality as we travel about the countryside adding more and more inns to our membership this season.

Spring is a perfect time for traveling. The roads are clear of ice and snow, and the crowds have not yet organized for their annual exodus from city and suburb. Although many inns consider spring to be the "off" season, we think it can be the best time to visit a country inn. In our travels this season we discovered delightful new countryside and enjoyed warm welcomes from gracious new hosts in the Northeast, the South, the Midwest, and on the west coast.

We also surveyed our member inns to find out, and pass on to you, what special things you can expect to find happening at the inns and around the countryside this spring. We've put together a sampling of adventures that await you, no matter where you'd like to be – on the water, in a country town, in a garden, in the sky, or even, in love.

As we write to you the thermometer outside our kitchen window registers in the thirties, but take heart, spring is officially here and within the whimsical weather of March there's a promise of what's to come. We hope that it's a season of joyous inn-going for you, our members, as you discover the country inn tradition in each of the corners of this beautiful country of ours.

Happy trails, Susan and John

On The Water

Judging from the innkeepers' responses, spring is definitely the time to be in, on, and by the water. One of our favorite past-times is beach-combing. All you need is a canvas bag to collect all of the treasurers that the winter storms have washed up and you'll probably have the beach to yourself. For beach-combing bases try:

The Jared Coffin House, Nantucket, MA 1661 House, Block Island, RI Windsor House, Newburyport, MA Craignar Inn, Clark Island, ME Country Inn, Harwichport, MA Lincoln House, Dennysport, ME MacCallum House, Mendocino, CA San Benito Inn, Half Moon Bay, CA Glenborough Inn, Santa Barbara, CA

Fishing

Then, if you would like to venture further into the water, we've uncovered a few proven fishing grounds:

- The Mississippi River stay at The Hotel, Winona, MN.
- The Delaware River stay at Innisfree north of New Hope, PA, or just across the river in NJ at the Lambertville House which has its Shad Festival the first week of May. Shad contests continue through May in Lambertville.
- Riverton, CT There's a fishing derby the third Saturday in April. The Riverton Inn is the place to swap stories and dry off.

■ The Battenkill River – The West Mountain Inn, in Arlington, VT overlooks a fishing ground where trout grow to legendary proportions. Don't forget to stop at Orvis Co. in nearby Manchester. Orvis is a world famous fisherman's supply house which also runs an excellent fly-fishing school throughout the season.

Canoeing

The melting of the winter's snows provides some fabulous canoeing during the spring. Choose anything from exciting white water thrills to a quiet paddle on a mill pond.

- Near Kingfield, ME, white water canoe races will be held in May on the Dead River. Winter's Inn assures us that the river will be far from dead, as they dam it up and let it loose for the event.
- In Waitsfield, VT the Tucker Hill Inn will direct you to The Clear Water Canoe Co. which will outfit you for your canoe trip along the White River.
- The Front Royal Canoe Race, April 24-25 is a short drive from the Wayside Inn in Middletown, VA.
- Sue Norris at the MacCallum House in Mendocino, CA will pack a picnic lunch and tell you where to rent canoes. You can paddle up one of several rivers with the tide, have a leisurely lunch, then paddle down stream towards the sea as the tide recedes.

Windjammer Cruise

If you are not interested in paddling, how about helping raise the sails of a windjammer? In June the Schooner Richard Robbins begins her weekly explorations of beautiful Lake Champlain, one of the cleanest lakes in the northeast. The crew will teach you the fine points of sailing, prepare delicious meals, and guide the schooner into secluded coves for a peaceful night's rest.

Scuba Diving

But if you really want to get into the water, we recommend scuba diving. Try Eaton Lodge in Key West or any of the California coastal inns: the Glenborough in Santa Barbara, the McCallum House in Mendicino, or the San Benito House in Halfmoon Bay.

In the Garden

What could be more indicative of the annual renewal of life than the flowers and green things that sprout, twine and unfurl in the spring? Country gardens and meadows are coming alive with color and fragrance.

And don't forget those first edibles poking their way thru the soil. In New England, a generous innkeeper may direct you to his favorite hidden patch of fiddleheads. These small, tightly curled ferns are a true delicacy from the woods. You'll probably find asparagus and rhubarb at a little stand at the side of the road or served fresh steaming on the table at your favorite inn.

Then come the berries. Most inns can tell you of the best spot for the pick-your-own variety. Bring home a quart of fresh strawberries after feasting on shortcake all weekend on your holiday in June.

We picked some special garden spots for you to explore this spring:
The Wayside Inn in Middletown tells us that Historic Garden Week in Virginia starts April 24. They also recommend a stroll through the grounds of the Belgrove Plantation, a restored mansion once occupied by Dolly Madison.

• We've found another beautifully blooming estate on the other side of the country. San Benito House in Half Moon Bay, CA, suggests the Filoli Estate Garden Tours. Biking (permitted along the paths of the estate) is a delightful way to see the acres of lush flower beds.

■ Thousands of daffodils have been planted all over the island of Nantucket by the Garden Club, and April 23-27 has been designated Daffodil Weekend. Take advantage of the Country Traveler's off-season weekday discount at the Jared Coffin House through the end of April and see Nantucket Island a-bloom with a sea of fluttering yellow petals. There will be an antique car parade and the Garden Club sponsors a flower show.

It's lovely to bike or drive out into the mountains around Steamboat, Oregon. Folks at the Steamboat Inn say the dogwood trees are magnificent and that the woods and meadows are filled with wildflowers in the spring.

 Call the West Mountain Inn in Arlington, Vermont for details on their "Leek and Fiddlehead Weekend". They'll be stalking the countryside for these delicious edibles in May.

Flea Markets, Antique Shows, Outlet Shops

In this issue we've chosen to highlight some of the special shopping opportunities we've discovered in country towns. For instance, springtime marks the reawakening of fleamarkets as well as flowers. Dealers have been collecting their wares all winter; furniture, tools, books, old clothes, new clothes, knick-knacks, plants, pottery and just about anything else you can think of – old or new – and now they're open and ready for business. Bucks County, Pennsylvania is one flea market haven. Stay at Innisfree or the Lambertville House and also explore the arts and crafts available in New Hope, PA.

Now is also the time for antiquing. Littleton, NH is a likely spot; the 1895 House can provide you with a map of local antique dealers and direct you to antique auctions in the area. Or stay at the Beal House and peruse their own antique shop. The Country Inn in Harwichport, MA suggests a show on May 28-29 at the First Congregational Church on Main St. in Harwich Center. Pico Mountain Base Lodge is hosting a Memorial Day antique show according to our friends at the Red Clover Inn in Mendon, VT. The Victorian in Whitinsville is only 35 miles from one of the largest antique shows in New England held in Brimfield, MA on May 3-8.

For great little shops, Eaton's Lodge in Key West, Florida, tells us that spring is off-season for shopping and the prices are right. And speaking of low prices, the North Conway, NH, area boasts a number of fine outlet stores – Gorham, Bass, Dexter, Hathaway and Yield House, Stay at Whitney's Village Inn, Staffords-in-the Field, Sugar Hill Inn, or Darby Field Inn.

In The Air

Our innkeepers advise us to look not only on land and sea for happenings this spring but also to look to the air for adventure. So we collected ideas on their varied aerial activities. High on our list are: Birdwatching — although Plum Island's natural magnificence is enough to warrant a trip, early spring brings serious birdwatchers to the Parker River Wildlife Refuge for their seasonal census taking. In late May you can witness the hatching of the terns. The Windsor House in Newburyport, MA is the place to stay. On 95 wooded acres, the Lincoln House in Dennysport, ME is a haven for birds of every description. Bald eagles and osprey are frequently sighted. One visitor, John James Audubon, loved the house and the Lincoln family so much that he named the Lincoln Sparrow in their honor.

If you'd like to get into the act yourself, Waitsfield, VT is a good place to try soaring through the air. Tucker Hill Lodge will direct you to certified instructors at the local airport for a flying lesson in a glider plane. And there will be hot-air balloons in the sky at the Littleton, New Hampshire festival, "Summer Street," on the third weekend in June, according to innkeeper Doug Clickinger of the Beal House.

Musical Celebrations of Spring

On Memorial Day weekend southern Vermont will be alive with dancers in scarlet waistcoats wielding sticks. The annual "Morris Ale" is the convergance of traditional Morris dancing teams, from all over the country, to celebrate spring in Vermont. The 18 teams disperse to dance around Brattleboro in the afternoon, convening on the common at 4:30. Sunday they will be sent throughout Windham County, dancing in Jamaica, Putney, Grafton, Westminster West, Townsend and Newfane, to name just a few towns. Stay at the Longwood House, in Marlboro, Saxtons River Inn, the Inn at Weston, the Golden Stage Inn in Proctorsville, or the Inn at Mt. Ascutney, in Brownsville.

"Chamarita", a Portugese festival, is celebrated in Half Moon Bay, CA, in June. Call the San Benito House for information and room reservations.

Grab your guitar and join in a fun weekend at West Mountain Inn, Arlington, VT. Call the inn for details on the Guitar Weekend in May.

In Love

What a perfect state to be in! Although many lovers claim to be oblivious to surroundings, we know from experience that a country inn is a wonderful place for romance. Imagine opening the door to your room – a room with velvet or lace at the windows, a fluffy comforter waiting on a canopied bed, a vase of lilacs and a chilled bottle of good wine on the bedside table. If you are touring the country inns for your wedding trip, plan to stay at least several nights in each inn so that you can really relax and enjoy the unique experience each inn offers. The discreet pampering you'll receive from the innkeeper as well as a bit of pastoral scenery can only enhance a honeymoon. Most inns have a special room to offer newlyweds; we have chosen to list some of the most intimate and romantic settings:

■ Jamieson House, Poynette, WI—has a luxurious guest room with a sunken bathtub. This elegant room and the outstanding cuisine of the inn makes a delightful honeymoon combination.

ore Inns Offer Membership Privileges to Country Traveler Members

Now as a Country Traveler member you will receive membership privileges at country inns from California to New York, and from Florida to Maine at no additional cost.

One reason why so many innkeepers want to participate in the Country Traveler program is because you, our member, have a reputation for being a discriminating traveler wishing to experience the simple elegance only country inns can offer. Innkeepers prefer guests who know what and what not to expect while visiting their inn. (People looking for room service and a bell captain will surely be disappointed). Those, however, who are looking for and expecting creativity, delicious home cooked meals and warm hospitality will feel right at home. Since Country Traveler members usually fit into this category, innkeepers appreciate you as guests and will gladly offer you up to 20% off the cost of room and meals upon your initial visit to their inn.

The presentation of your membership card will be sufficient to receive the discount until you receive the invitations to be added to your travel folder.

It is our pleasure to announce the following inns have become part of the Country Traveler family.

Wyoming

Medicine Bow Guest Ranch, Saratoga – a dude ranch perfect for the whole family. Horseback riding is the featured attraction during the warm weather; cross country skiing takes over in the winter. Eight rustic cabins can accomodate 4 to 8 people. Weekly rates start at $298.00 double, including three meals a day, lower rates for children. Membership privilege 20% discount on room & meals. Hosts Bill and Betty Ann Prather, Box 752, Saratoga, WY 82331, 307/326-5439.

Montana

Sundance Lodge, Wise River – A guest ranch located in a hidden valley high on the mountains three miles from Anaconda Pintlas Wilderness. Horses, llamas, and Scottish highland cattle are raised here. Explore the countryside on foot or on horseback with experienced guides; hunt, fish, or ski during the day and come back to the lodge for hot home-cooked meals. Rates $32.00 double, in lodge; $38.00-42.00 for cabin. Membership privilege 20% discount on room rate. Hosts Les and Jan Davis, Wise River, MT 59762, 406/689-2491.

Oregon

Steamboat Inn, Steamboat – an Oregon-style rustic inn on the banks of the magnificent North Umpqua River. Accomodations are in rustic cabins which are carpeted, pine paneled, with private bath and deck overlooking the river. Great place for fishermen and sportsmen. Rates from $40.00 double. Membership privilege 20% discount on room rate. Hosts Jim and Sharon Van Loan, P.O. Box 36, Idleyld Park, OR 97447, 503/498-2411.

California

Court Street, Jackson – Two and one half hours east of San Francisco, located in the center of California's Mother Lode area. This Victorian style inn has five guest rooms with lace curtains, antique beds, handmade quilts, fresh flowers, and complimentary wine or tea in each guest room. Rates $35.00-60.00 double, breakfast included. Membership privilege 20% on room rate available all year Sunday thru Thursday and on long weekends. Innkeeper, Mildred Burns, 215 Court St., Jackson CA 95642, 209/223-0416.

Glenborough Inn, Santa Barbara – Each of the 4 guest rooms in this 1880 Victorian home is uniquely, and romantically decorated. The four rooms in the "Cottage" offer further privacy and luxury – perfect for honeymooning. Antiques and fresh flowers inside, outside are blue skies, and year round sun. Beaches, museums, shopping, and galleries of Santa Barbara are within easy walking distance. Private spa. Rates $55.00-$65.00 shared bath, $70-$100 private bath. Includes large continental breakfast and wine in the evening. Membership privilege 20% discount all year. Innkeepers Jo Ann Bell and Pat Hardy, 1327 Bath St., Santa Barbara, CA 93101, 805/966-0589.

The Inn At Rancho Sante Fe, Rancho Santa Fe – Twenty acres of luxuriant gardens surround the quiet complex of private cottages and the adobe mission-style main house. The inn offers four dining areas, swimming pool, and a beach house at Del Mar. All of the rooms have private baths and many of the cottages have their own patios. Room rates range from $40.00-$80.00. Membership privilege, 20% discount on rooms all year. Innkeeper Dan Royce, P.O. Box 869, Rancho Santa Fe, CA 92067, 714/576-1131.

San Benito House, Half Moon Bay - Tucked away in the unspoiled seaside village of Half Moon Bay an historic hostelry has been renovated with the care and flavor of country inns of the best traditions. The exquisite cuisine is classic country French and northern Italian. Six of the eight rooms have private bath. Rates from $29.00-$45.00, streetside and $50.00-$70.00, gardenside, including Continental breakfast. Membership privilege 20% discount Sunday-Thursday 10% on meals at all times. Innkeeper Carol Regan, Rte 1, Box 4A, Half Moon Bay, CA 94109 415/726-3425.

MacCallum House, Mendocino – Choose the picket-fenced ginger-bread house with its nine carefully restored guestrooms. Or you may want to stay in one of the 5 outbuildings – the greenhouse, the watertower, the carriage house, the gazebo or the luxurious suites of the former barn. The style is casual and the pace is relaxed. Rates range from $35.00-$62.50 including Continental breakfast. Membership privilege 20% discount on room rate Sunday-Friday. Innkeeper Sue Norris, PO Box 206, Mendicino, CA 95460, 707/937-0289.

Hotel Leger, Mokelumne Hill – In the Mother Lode country, a very wild-west looking building in a town that is only one block long. The hotel blends authenticity and modern convenience – Victorian furnishings and a heated pool. Linger on the porch after dinner, or slip into the frontier saloon; live, light theatre happens every Saturday night. Rates range from $26.00-$44.00. Membership privilege 20% discount on room and meals. Innkeeper Sue Clark, Main St., Mokelumne Hill, CA 95245, 209/286-1401.

Lecture Series:

"Selecting The Perfect Country Inn"

Enjoy a one-hour guided tour of the best of America's country inns. The Country Traveler has put together a series of lecture and slide show presentations entitled, "How to Select the Perfect Country Inn". Beginning in April, Susan Louvitakis (the original "country traveler") will share with audiences in the Northeast her expertise and adventures as a country inn lover. And she'll illustrate her talks with magnificent color slides picturing the inns from the inside out. You'll see panoramic views a guest might enjoy from his window; you'll also have a chance to study fine architectural details and see close-ups of rare antiques and unique collectables. Susan will introduce you to some of the innkeepers and show you mouthwatering shots of country tables laden with their fare.

From her experience she will give you the inside story – which inns rate high on romance, and which ones your children will adore; in which inns to expect haute-cuisine and which will leave a homemade pie out in the kitchen for a snack. Susan can also clue you in on the events and recreation in the countryside 'round about an inn – from a special shop to a secret swimming hole. This presentation should whet your appetite for travel as well as help you to be selective in deciding which inns you'll want to visit this year.

Country Cooking

Part of the appeal of a great country inn is the food. We all know that the menu of each inn is unique and most inns have a few specialities that keep their guests returning for more. We have asked a few innkeepers to share their secrets with our members and they have kindly responded with the following delicious treats. These are the first of a series of favorite country inn recipes. We hope you'll enjoy them.

In the pursuit of excellence, innkeeper Jeff Smith and his staff at the Jamieson House in Poynette, WI, love to experiment and create new dishes. Tysh, who gave me this recipe, suggests that when you master this incredibly light souffle roll, try varying it a bit. For instance, perhaps create a walnut raspberry roll.

Hazelnut Souffle Roll

6 eggs, separated (extra large) 3/4 c sugar 1½ c. coarsley ground hazelnuts 1 t baking powder (about the size of grains of rice)

Beat yolks on high until lemony and light and they resemble whipped cream. Then add half of the sugar and continue beating for another minute. Mix hazelnuts and baking powder; and fold into yolks. Beat whites until they have soft peaks; add remaining sugar and continue beating for about 1 more minute. Whites should be stiff but not dry. Fold 1/3 whites into yolk mixture, then fold that back into remaining whites. Line a jelly roll pan with waxed paper; grease and flour it. Bake at 350° for 20-25 minutes until corners collapse; cool. Invert onto wax paper which has been sprinkled with powdered sugar. With a light touch, spread mixture of:

3/4 cup apricot preserves

1/4 c apricot puree

evenly over souffle roll. Then spread sweetened whipped cream 1/2" thick over apricot mixture. (If you like, add rum to sweetened whipped cream.) Roll as jelly roll, cut into 1½" slices and serve.

Chef and innkeeper Susie Dawson at The Lambertville House in Lambertville, NJ, specializes in "Regional American" cuisine. She shared with us this recipe recently requested by Gourmet magazine.

Apple Walnut Custard Pie

The crust:

1¾ c. flour ½ t. salt 1¼ c. sugar, scant 1¼ stick butter

1 t. cinnamon ¼ c. cold apple juice or cold water Combine dry ingredients; add butter and cut coarse. Add the liquid by sprinkling. Make a ball, chill, and roll out crust.

The filling:

 1½ c. sour cream
 2 t. vanilla

 ¾ c. sugar
 ½ t. salt

½ c. flour 8-9 good-sized, tart apples, sliced

1 egg

Mix everything together except apples. Add apples, mix well and put into chilled crust. Bake pie for 10 minutes at 450° then lower to 350°.

Meanwhile, prepare the topping:
1 c. chopped walnuts
1 t. cinnamon
2 c. flour
3 t. nutmeg, scant
3 c. firmly packed brown sugar
4 pinch salt

½ c. butter Combine the first seven ingredients and mix well. Blend in butter until crumbly. After pie has baked at 350° for 40-45 minutes, cover with topping and bake for 15 minutes more. Cool and refrigerate before serving.

- The Victorian, Whitinsville, MA once an elaborate private mansion, the inn offers commodious guestrooms furnished in every detail in authentic Victorian antiques. The master bedroom has a separate dressing room with mirrored closet doors and a tufted red velvet chaise lounge.
- Edson Hill Manor, Stowe, VT the original owner of this estate had an art studio built for herself that is now a perfect country-style Bridal Suite. It has huge windows providing a lovely view of the valley, a small library, fireplace and private bath, and best of all, it's set off by itself a bit and not surrounded by other guestrooms.
- Saxtons River Inn, Saxtons River, VT all of the guestrooms of this inn convey an immediate feeling of luxury created by the beautiful furnishings, especially the spectacular wall paper. Our favorite is the green floral room in the back of the inn on the second floor.
- MacCallum House, Mendocino, CA-the upper barn suite seems to have been created for honeymooners. It's this inn's equivalent to a penthouse with a large stone fireplace, magnificent ocean views from the bedroom and the sitting room, skylights in the private bathroom, and a deck that faces west.
- Waterford Inn, Waterford, ME obvious choice at this quiet, country inn would be the room on the second floor with a bath and its own porch which gives you some added privacy while enjoying the fresh country air.
- Eaton Lodge, Key West, FL -All the guestrooms have highly polished floors, delightful rag rugs and antiques. Some rooms have private patios or a porch overlooking a plush tropical garden.
- The Glenborough Inn, Santa Barbara, CA any of the four new guest rooms in The Cottage would make an ideal choice for a very romantic vacation. Each room has its own private entrance and is adorned with plush antiques, fluffy quilts, and fresh flowers. A delectable light repast is delivered to your room in the morning and you may luxuriate in the inn's own very private spa.

Whitneys Village Inn, Jackson, NH - has a few guest rooms wellsuited for a honeymoon; we think the best is the cottage by the brook which is somewhat secluded and has a fireplace.

Edwardian Whoopee

One of the most romantic evenings we know of has been created by Judith and Fritz Crumb at the Windsor House in Newburyport, MA. Not only do they offer a choice of several ideal guestrooms with priceless antiques and window seats overlooking their old fashion flower garden, but they also offer Edwardian Whoopee. You and your sweetheart (and up to 4 friends) can reserve the elegant and intimate rooms plus the innkeepers' services for your own private whoopee. This is a very private and very formal evening centered around a deluxe ten course meal, served over a four hour period. The tables are set with china, crystal, and silver, all family heirlooms of the innkeepers. The mood is set with candlelight, Renaissance court music, and a crackling fire during the cold weather. This meal is delicately paced, with each course providing a different taste and visual experience. There are "intermissions" now and then when you may wish to take a moonlight stroll down to the wharf between courses. The entire evening is orchestrated to perfection by Judith and Fritz. Once the meal is concluded you may retire to your awaiting bridal suite upstairs. Edwardian Whoopee goes far beyond being a meal and becomes an unforgettable event.

TO: All FLY FISHERMAN Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

FROM: Len Levine, Vice President Marketing

DATE: September 15, 1982

SUBJECT: Change in issue designations

I just want to let you know that in our efforts to gather more mileage for your advertising in FLY FISHERMAN, effective with our first issue of 1983, we are changing the cover designations. NOTHING ELSE IS CHANGED—JUST THE COVER DESIGNATION. This is being done to insure a longer newsstand display for each issue of FLY FISHERMAN and hence a longer display of your advertising.

The magazine will continue to appear in the mailbox and on the newsstand at the same times. The January/February issue will be called March; March will become May; April will become June; May/June will change to July; July/September becomes September and October/December is now just December.

The magazine however, will appear when it always has: in January, March, April, May, July and October. And therefore, advertising reservation and material due dates will continue as they have previously.

What we're doing is giving your advertising in each issue more time on the newsstand.

Should you have any questions, please call.

Cordially,

Len Levine
