Dear Ray:

Received your note of April 4.

So spring is here! Been receiving your interesting notes and am grateful for the information.

The few stakes that are located right next to the south end of the dormitory do not mark any plants I am interested in. The closest stakes to the building that mark plants to be measured are 5 or more feet away, near the southeast corner, and the rest 10 feet or more away, and as I remember, all south of the path along the south side of the building. All in this location were bunchgrasses. Did the plants start to grow under the snow?

Let us know when we can make it to the station by car. Hold on a while longer and will be in to see you.
