Herman was thriving. The blacksmith shop was a shambles at first, littered with old chunks of metal, nothing sorted. Between sessions of sickle grinding, Herman straightened things up, ut them away. It has taken me until now to fully realize: he remade it into the greenhouse, a place of orderliness.

The hayfields in neat patterns right to the base of the mountains all around--“Maybe is Switzerland,” Herman said--lived up to their reputation, the mowers having all they could do to cut the high stands of “Jeezus, this resembles work,” Peerless said after a day of in the good weather and bountiful windrows the crew turned into haymaking fiends, the loaf-shaped haystacks rising in the fields. Harv was a haystacking marvel Some days we skidded the beaverslide to three new fields...

The purple Cadillac pulled in one evening, like an automobile ad in a slick magazine. Rags You always see him from here to Sunday, in those 00 duds. With him was a blackhaired beauty who instantly reminded me of Letty, except that this one’s uniform was a fringed white leather rodeo rig like 00 wear. “Go on in and make yourself at home, honeybunch. climbed out stiffly I’ll be right there.” Going to the trunk of the car, he lifted out his saddle and rigging and headed for the the barn. Jones met him on the way. “Got a visitor, I see. Another buckle bunny?”

“More or less. Sueie Q there is only gonna be here overnight until we pull out for Pendleton in the morning. She’s an exhibition rider, stands up in the saddle at full gallop and that sort of thing. Says she needs a dose of country air.” Jones chuckled. “Is that what it’s called these days?”

“Don’t have such a dirty mind, Jonesie.” “Saw on the way in you’re actually putttting up some hay. How’d you do in rounding up a crew?”
taken me until now to fully realize: he remade it into the greenhouse, a place of orderliness.

Herman was peeling the poles to a sharp point with a drawknife. Jones had come down to give an instruction. “Cut them kind of turvy on the end,” an instruction Herman seemed to understand better than I did.

“Look, it’s Rags!”

Unmistakably, the purple Cadillac was pulling up to the house, like an automobile ad in a slick magazine, what with evening enriching the color of the car and . Rags climbed stiffly out from behind the wheel, still in his bronc riding clothes. For once he was not the real feature, though, because with him was a blackhaired beauty who instantly made me think of Letty, except that this one’s uniform as she popped out of the convertible with a flounce and a laugh was a fringed white leather rodeo outfit like palomino troupe riders and so forth wear. Herman and I tried not to stare, without success.

“Go on in and make yourself comfortable, darling,” Rags shooed her into the house with her ditty bag. “I need to act like a rancher a little bit. Catch up with you in no time.”

As she sashayed on in, Jones went to greet Rags. “Got a visitor, I see. Another buckle bunny?”

“Naw, she’s a performer,” Ragws drawled, flicking a spot of arena dust off his 00 shirt.

“I bet,” Jones said with a straight face.

“Suzie Q there is only gonna be here overnight until we pull out for Pendleton in the morning. She’s an exhibition rider, stands up in the saddle at full gallop and that sort of thing. Came along with me because she says she needs a refreshing whiff of country air.”

Jones actually laughed. “Is that what it’s called these days?”
“Don’t have such a dirty mind, Jonesie,” Rags 00ed. Herman’s expression said he wished he’d kept me in the man talk in the bunkhouse. “Saw on the way in you’re actually putting up some hay. How’d you do in rounding up a crew?”

“Old hands from the jungle same as ever, except for” —Jones swept a hand toward us—“our Quiz Kid stacker driver and his one-eyed grandpa from the Alps.”

“That’s different. Gives the place a little foreign flavor.” He spotted Herman and me. “Let me take a wild guess,” he said as he came over to shake hands, “which of you is the Alpine one-eyed jack.”

Herman gave him a handshake that made him wince. “Hey, be careful. That’s the hand I dance with.”

I shook hands with him almost soft as a sissy, blurring “We saw you at Crow Fair.”

“Did you now.” Rags showed a long-jawed grin. “You had to look quick, the way that hoss had me coming and going.”

“Buzzard Head,” Herman exclaimed. “You rided him until the whistler.”

“I’m a fortunate old kid,” the best bronc rider on earth said modestly. “That hoss was part fish.” He initiated with his hand the way a trout would jump straight ahead, in a series. “Looked a lot harder to stick onto than he was.”

“Hah

“Well, nice meeting you. Got company waiting.”

Here was my chance and it would be gone by morning. Recklessly I

“Uhm, can I please ask a favor? I need to make a phone call. I mean, I won’t get in your way with the company or anything.”

“Hey,” Jones 00. Rags looked surprised at my boldness. “What’s the hurry on a phone call?”
“To my sick grandma.” Seeing Rags glance at Herman, I hastily inserted,

“On the other side of the family. She’s in the hospital in Great Falls, from an awful operation she had to have, it’s a way long story.”

Rags rubbed his jaw, a gesture I have always associated with sharpening what comes out the mouth next, as smart guys seem to do it. “Sounds like you have every reason to get on that phone. Come on and use the one in my office.”

Somehow I had not anticipated this,

“Just so we’re straight on this phone business. You can check on Granny every so often even if I’m not here. I’ll tell Jones and Mrs. 00 it’s okay.”

Somewhere upstairs a radio was going, nice and soft. He winked at me and headed for the stairs, calling, “I’m coming, Delilah.”

I sat at the desk Across a summerful of distances was Gram, putting on miles in her wheelchair, reading my weekly letters supposedly chronicling the good times in was having in Manitowoc with Aunt Kate. I knew I should phone her, but was afraid to. What if she decided to make up with her stuckup sister, find out I was no longer in Wisconsin, and demand to know where in 00 I was and what I was up to

As I had my courage up and was reaching for the phone, I heard a shuffling of slippers in the doorway. The cook, Mrs. 00 was on her way to the kitchen, probably for a snack which her ample build did not need,

She and Smiley hated each other, wrangling daily about the condition of the milk buckets he bought in and she had to wash along with the kitchen dishes.

“Is it my fault that cow can crap and kick like 00? I’m gonna shoot that bitch someday,” not making it as clear as he should have that he meant Waltzing Matilda rather than Mrs. 00.
Exactly as I had seen myself when I approached Wendell Williamson to drive the stacker team in Double W haying, I was proudly in charge of a pair of workhorses and a steel cable that the team pulled to hoist the stacker fork laden with hay, and, ultimately, responsible for dumping the load where Harv wanted it, on the top of the stack. The best way to think of my but vital job, and you can bet I did, was as something like an elevator operator, in that era when lifts in tall buildings were run by an attendant in a spiffy uniform who asked “Floors, please?” and let you out at Four in the Great Falls department store for linens or, to take it to in larger terms, at the Empire State observation deck 00 floors up if you were going to the top of America back east.

A difference was that the elevator attendant was operating an Otis motor while I was manipulating a couple of ton of horses at the end of leather reins. Horses are not thrilled with walking backwards--me either--but that was half our job, backing to the stacker after the load of hay was dumped at Harv’s altitude. My salvation was Queen, as smart as she was huge, tugging sleepy Brandy along with her. In the construction of each stack--and Skeeter’s question back in the hobo jungle had been pertinent, the Big Hole method was giant stacks--the team and I wore a path in the stubble, like the front walk to the mansion of hay Harv was building. It was hard work, being on my feet all day long, with the sun beating down. I would end up each day all in but my toenails.

And see, I held a triumphant mental conversation with Gram, I wasn’t too young to live in a bunkhouse like a regular ranch hand, right in there with the other hoboes--well, haymakers we had all advanced to now--as if I belonged. Of course, I owed that to Herman, watching out for me.

“So the town whittler gets hooty with me--” or probably Apaches, and a number of them will fall into types. It is human nature producing basic varieties on the family tree of man. Skeeter was the storyteller.

"--and nextest thing I know, he’s got his smoke wagon out and cocked and in my beezer--"

"Whoa, smoke wagon must be a gun," I said breathlessly. Herman "pistolero." Pooch’s contribution to conversation was almost entirely "Damn straight" and "You said it" as he 00. At first I wondered at the lack of teasing him, because in a schoolyard anyone with a slow mind was in for it. Until I overheard Highpockets take Jones aside that first morning and explain that Pooch had been seriously worked over by a sap-wielding railroad bull in the Pocatello yards, notorious as the toughest anywhere, and been slow in the head evr since. Jones said nobody needed to be a mental giant to drive a scatter rake, and he’d make sure Pooch was given the tamed team of horses, after my own.

"--and he marches me off to the calaboose, thirty days for expectorating on the sidewalk."

stony loneseome."

Herman murmured to me, "How many languages does English come in?"

Peerless was the bunkhouse lawyer...

"I done it! Beat the Midnighter at his own game." His moon face lit with a grin, he celebrated with a fresh chaw.

"Care to make it two out of three," Midnight Frankie said over the purr of his shuffle of the deck, "playing for something besides matchsticks?"

"I sure as hell would not," Peerless declined the offer to be taken for a ride. "I’d a whole lot rather play rooty toot toot on my trusty skin flute."

I was working on that anatomically and not really getting anywhere when Highpockets said sharply, "Watch your mouth around the kid, can’t you?"
“I ain’t burning his ears off, am I, Snag, “Peerless protested. “He has to learn the facts of life sometime.”

“Insofar as you ever seen any from a distance,” Skeeter gibed.

“Sure, I’m kind of interested,” I encouraged Peerless. “What’s that flute thinger mean?”

That brought about rare hesitation in Peerless as he studied me sitting there on my bunk, rough-clad in a thousand-miler shirt like the rest of the crew but still plainly a kid, although a husky one. Whatever other changes the summer had produced in me, I had grown considerably, right past any semblance of eleven going on twelve.

“How about it?” Peerless defended his position to the bunkhouse generally but Highpockets in particular. “Let him sail around the world?” It was years down the line before I fully understood that the phrase meant something like learning the dictionary of sex.

“It’s up to One Eye,” Highpockets ruled. “None of your concern, so just can that kind of mouthing off and--”

“The Pockets is right.” Knuckles showing white on the handle of the water bucket, Herman loomed into the room, there is no other word for it, fixing Peerless with a look that would not be argued with. “Scotty is good boy. I will take care of his educating.”

Truer words were never, as the man said.

“Let’s go for walk.”

“I know they cuss like crazy and carry on like that. But they’ve been places and done things.” “Like you have.”

“Not much good has it done me for being 00 grandpa.”

He gazed into the dark, as he must have gazed into many a night since that one in a Munich beer hall.
