

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA
By Ivan Doig

LOS ANGELES TIMES BOOK REVIEW	Sept. 30, 1990
WASHINGTON POST BOOK REVIEW	Sept. 30, 1990
SEATTLE WEEKLY	Nov. 7, 1990
MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY MUSEUM STORE CATALOG 1990-1991
SEATTLE TIMES	Oct. 21, 1990
ST. PAUL'S PIONEER PRESS	Nov. 18, 1990
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR	Nov. 20, 1990
SEATTLE TIMES	Dec. 30, 1990

Books

DONN FRY
Times book editor

Time is a commodity in Ivan Doig's Montana, almost as tangible as a flock of sheep or a fresh-cut crop of hay.

Through his novels "English Creek" and "Dancing at the Rascal Fair," and now "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" (Atheneum, $18.95), the final volume in his trilogy about the state's Two Medicine country, time loops gracefully, almost casually. Yet it also has the steady, inexorable flow of history, as Doig peels away layer after layer of the lives that pass through Montana from the late 19th century through the state's centennial celebrations last year.

Memory is the force that energizes this commodity, time: "Memories are stories our lives tell us," Jick McCaskill declares near the end of the new novel, after he has taken a long look at his own 65 years. His final speech in the wintry dawn of Montana's 100th birthday, at a stirring flag-raising ceremony with family and friends in the town of Gros Ventre, provides a moving and eloquent coda to a remarkable trio of novels.

Like "English Creek," "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" is filtered through Jick's cantankerous personality. But while his memories in the earlier novel were corralled into the wide-eyed, golly-gee world view of a naive 14-year-old, "Ride With Me" gives full rein to an adult sensibility that manages to be loquacious and humane, that is guided by the wisdom and self-deprecating humor that come only with age.

Doig has seen to it that memory and history ride together, 1989-style, in this new novel. It takes the form of a picaresque ramble around Montana after Jick reluctantly agrees to use his Winnebago RV to ferry

Harper & Row

MONTANA AND MEMORY

Finale of Doig's trilogy takes us back to Two Medicine country

Ivan Doig has seen to it that memory and history ride together.

on that land."

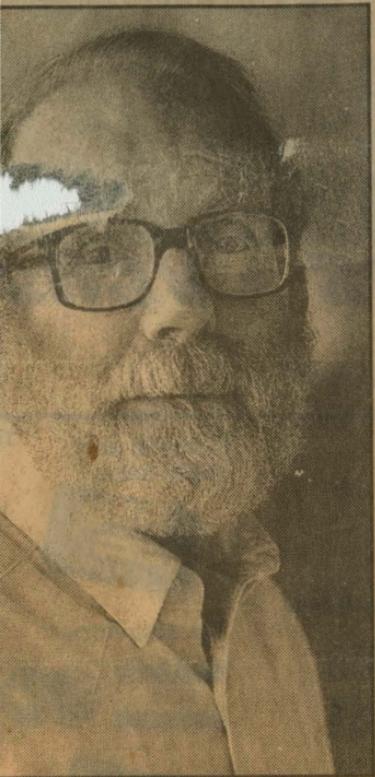

The independent Mariah, who always "seemed to be the only author of herself," wheels Jick into joining their four-month journey, and although he professes to loath his former son-in-law, the trio is soon plying the interstates and back roads in search of stories and photos that burrow beneath the skin of centennial hoopla. Complementary as journalists in a way they never were as spouses, Mariah and Riley are soon producing compelling features, angering Montana chauvinists and, to Jick's consternation, warming up to each other again.

This is no mere Montana travelogue, and unlike "English Creek," whose lively prose was saddled with a glacial narrative pace, "Ride With Me" accelerates to a comfortable rhythm and seems to move along on cruise control. With Jick at the wheel, the "Bago" transports them from a buffalo preserve to the mine-cratered devastation of Butte, from the ghost of Shelby's boxing-match fame to the ghosts of Jick's own ancestors — the "Dancing at the Rascal Fair" generation — at the historical society in Helena.

They steer through Montana's romanticized past and the rocky economics of its present, always guided by Jick's crusty humor and Doig's deft touch with the landscape: "We might as well have been a carload of Swiss trying to sightsee Mongolia," says Jick, when they reach southeastern Montana, a bleak nowhere-land new to them all. "Grassland with sage low and thin on it ran to all the horizons... a surprising number of attempts had been made to scratch some farming into this barebone plain, but what grew here mostly was distance."

But this is a journey through memory as much as landscape, and Doig pulls off a daring but gloriously successful gamble. Midway through, the trio grows to four with the addition of a woman from Jick's past who is as unexpected as she is welcome. She puts time in perspective for him, however, allowing Jick to finally admit that "a person tends to think that the past has hardened

A.E. Aralza, The Arizona Daily Star an Doig is in Tucson

Arizona Daily Star
Feb. 16, '91

Western author's next book to include Arizona

By J.C. Martin
The Arizona Daily Star

Author Ivan Doig's Arizona fans who read his Montana sagas with unflinching pleasure will like this news: He is about to turn his attention to Arizona.

Doig, born in White Sulphur Springs, Mont., 51 years ago, began his published literary career in 1978 with a Montana memoir, "This House of Sky." He used family recollections to paint the harsh, rewarding life of early Montana pioneers. The book was nominated for a National Book Award.

His next effort, "Berneta's Book," — at the moment just a working title, — will be a continuation of "This House of Sky," Doig says. It will be partly factual.

Berneta was Doig's mother and she died in 1945 when he was barely 6. The family — Doig, his mother and father — spent the winter preceding her death in Phoenix and Wickenburg. There Berneta Doig, who had asthma, tried to regain her health.

In telling his mother's story, basically that of a girl and a woman who grew up in Montana in the early 20th century, the Arizona sojourn will come into the picture through her letters. They were sent faithfully every two weeks to her brother serving in the South Pacific during World War II.

"She was a clear, vivid writer," Doig says. One of her accounts, he remembers, concerned a Montana Club get-together in Mesa.

In spite of Berneta's improving health, Arizona could not keep the Doigs. "Home-sickness, family considerations," Doig says, drew them back to Montana. So Ivan Doig did not grow up in Wickenburg, after all, where he might have devoted his talents to presenting Central Arizona with the same chiseled precision he uses on Montana.

On the other hand, although Doig has spent most of his literary career portraying Montana life, he hasn't lived there since 1957 when he left home to attend Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

For the past 26 years he has lived in Seattle with his wife, Carol, a former journalist who now teaches at Shoreline Community College.

He returns to Montana regularly, however, as he did earlier this month to receive a Governor's Arts Award. He won similar awards in Washington in 1979, '81, '85 and '88.

Despite ties to his home state, Doig insists he could never live there. "You have to wear too many hats in a small city."

He cites the case of writer friends whose "good citizen consciences" keep them on civic committees and boards. "That and listening in on the downtown geezer table," Doig shakes his head in cheerful dismay. "They just won't let you alone."

He prefers what he calls the "aloneness" of his Seattle suburb.

Doig traces his decision to be a writer back to junior high school and the encouragement of a sympathetic teacher.

"I dropped out of Future Farmers and signed up to take a course in typing. You talk about a career decision."

Graduating from Northwestern in 1961, Doig spent a few years at various journalistic jobs (a newspaper and a magazine) before getting a Ph.D. in Western history at the University of Washington.

Beginning in 1970, Doig spent the next 10 years, "twice the length for human sanity," as a full-time free-lance writer. He was turning out a couple dozen articles a year when "This House of Sky" started making the rounds of New York publishers.

Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, which bought it, was the 13th publisher to read it.

But when the rejection slips started coming back with comments such as, "This is really well-written but we don't see any commercial prospects," Doig says, he knew he was getting close.

"It's hard to say enough good things about what happens when Ivan Doig sets words

See DOIG, Page 7B

Doig

Continued from Page 6B

down on a page," a critic wrote.

"He has that magical quality," one fan put it, "of being able to make you see, taste, feel and smell what he is writing about."

It is not something he achieves casually. Most Doig books have gone through at least three and often as many as seven rewrites. Doig, who still relies mainly on a manual typewriter, says, "It's the first writing that's tough. Getting the words out of my head and onto anything. By the third draft, it starts to sing."

Using a Roget's Thesaurus that he acquired in college, Doig works at what he describes as "sorting words." (For the Montana trilogy "English Creek," "Dancing at the Rascal Fair," and "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana," he also used a songwriter's rhyming dictionary.)

Sometimes, Doig says, he will look over a manuscript "just for verbs." Sometimes, "to see how every paragraph begins and ends. I like to read things out loud to hear their rhythm, the turns of phrase." He has been known to sit at his desk reading silently, tapping the eraser end of a pencil in cadence as his lips move.

"I try to work two stubborn substances, research and craft," Doig told an interviewer for the "Contemporary Authors" series, "into becoming the hardest alloy of all — a good story."

Doig will be at The Haunted Bookshop, 7211 N. Northern Ave., 2-4 p.m. tomorrow to sign books and greet readers.

'The Last Best Place' in America

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA

By Ivan Doig
(Atheneum: $18.95;
384 pp.; 0-689-12019-2)

Reviewed by Judith Freeman

When does a farmer or rancher finally give up on making a living from his land and sell out to some distant corporation or resign himself to foreclosure? When does the small-town grocer, undercut by malls, do the same? And what about the young people in rural America, whose best prospects lie in the big cities? What happens to our collective spirit when we pull up roots and dissolve communities, when families find themselves separated?

"How and when should we leave our own roots?" each of the main characters in Ivan Doig's new novel asks. In doing so, they voice an issue on the minds of many Americans.

"Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" is the last volume of Doig's Montana trilogy, which covers 100 years of Montana history as viewed through the eyes of the fictional McCaskills, a Scottish immigrant ranching family. The first volume, "English Creek" (1984), was set in the 1880s when the first McCaskills arrived in Montana. The second volume, "Dancing at the Rascal Fair" (1987), took place during the Depression years. Last year, Montana celebrated its centennial, an event that provided the perfect theme and setting for the concluding story about the McCaskills, in which a father and daughter set out in a Winnebago during the centennial summer in order to "get the true story" of the state.

Jick McCaskill, a recently widowed rancher, is talked into making this journey by his daughter Mariah, a photographer for a newspaper that has assigned her to do a series on the centennial. Joining them is Mariah's ex-husband, Riley Wright, a wise-cracking reporter who is to provide the text for Mariah's pictures. Jick, Mariah and Riley—a reconstituted family largely at odds with each other—set out in the mobile home, crisscrossing the state in search of stories.

The novel has a lively tone and a quick pace. Doig has a perfect ear for colloquial speech, and he is both eloquent (in passages where he simulates Riley's journalism) and funny (when he sets the trio to verbal sparring). They encounter old-timers as well as new immigrants such as the Vietnamese waiter enthusiastically struggling with the new language. The trio visits historical monuments, battlefields and preserves where they gaze wistfully at the remaining buffalo—once so thick "the country was one robe." Inevitably their own personal histories unfold. The trip jars memories, of Riley and Mariah's acrimonious divorce, of Jick's own unhappy first marriage and his deeply satisfying second one.

Doig uncovers both the beautiful and the tattered sides of Montana: the dump heaps and earth poisons left by strip mining; the mobile missiles—"blue taxis to Armageddon" (there are 200 Minuteman missile silos across Montana). He writes of the defeated lives on Indian reservations, and the "bottom-wage way of life" that drives young people elsewhere.

Please Turn to Page 7

Freeman is the author of "The Chinchilla Farm," a novel, and a collection of stories, "Family Attractions."

MIRIAM BERKLEY

Ivan Doig

More WASPs in the Ivy

THE LADY OF SITUATIONS

By Louis Auchincloss
(Houghton Mifflin: $20.95;
275 pp.; 0-395-54411-4)

happens is a bit of polite adultery rocking the walls of the "monastery," plus some milder breaches of honor.

Characters speak operatically. Aunt Ruth, the struggle to hold a moral standard against the pressures of modernity holds up as a contemporary morality play. Indeed, he pretty much managed this Jamesian feat cuts a swath of destruction around itself and leaves a trail of battered psyches in its wake. Out of this wasteland of a 1950s dream family gone bad steps a narrator, the daughter, Maureen Emery Lannier:

"By the time I went to college I hated my name so much I dropped it altogether. Emery, my grandmother's maiden name, felt right. I liked the idea of grinding and polishing, a hard abrasive substance. I grew to see myself like that; grinding and polishing myself to remove the traces of Frank and Nina from my life."

However, Emery can neither scrape away her parents, Frank and Nina, nor get them to call her anything but Maura.

The narrative begins when the 40-ish Emery goes to her parents' house hoping to find the home she has never had. After spending the last 25 years trying to run away from her parents and her past, Emery is looking to make peace with them (her mother has written that Emery's father is about to die) as well as with herself. Soon after our scars weren't identical," says Emery. "We all grow up differently, learn different lessons. Tattoos. Scars. Scars don't tan. Scars don't heal. Scars don't. Scars are."

Regardless of how much Emery would like to turn her back on the past and its scars, she can not. On one level, the narrative deals with Emery's attempts to deal with present-day life, the effort to find her parents new housing and the like. In a subtext, driven by her frequent flashbacks as she metonymically skips between past and present, she attempts to deal with the past. She knows, however, that "reinventing the past is as impossible as skating on hot water."

The Lanniers resemble the self-contained, eccentric, virtually friendless families that Anne Tyler creates. However, with the Lanniers, eccentricities shade into pathologies. "My family must be terminally marginal," Emery thinks. "We were a normal, middle-class family. On the right track in a wrecked car."

The parents, Frank and Nina, drink themselves into stupors nearly every night. Nina, who refuge in each other. "There always been you and I," Drew said. "We've never gotten close to any one else." There also is a third child, Julia, long dead, present in the book only through her absence.

Absences affect this book like black holes, always tugging at characters. Throughout her work Vogan deals with loss, whether it be the loss of a limb—a particular fascination of hers—or of a lover. Emery's sometime lover, Paris, and her younger sister, Julia, hover in the penumbra of "Blueprints," although Paris does make a few appearances. According to Emery, "We all live with ghosts. Paris is my ghost, Julia is my mother's." Emery can say goodbye to Paris, if only for a while, but her mother cannot say goodbye to Julia.

In "Blueprints" as well as in her other books ("In Shelly's Leg," "Loss of Flight," "Scenes From the Homefront"), Vogan knits facts, concrete knowledge, into the fabric

'Ride With Me'

Continued From Second Page

But he also celebrates the beauty of the land and the tenacity of spirit found in Montanans "who've been perpetually game to outwork the levels of pay here because they can love a mountain with their eyes while doing it," people who see life as "an up-and-down proposition." In the great expanse of Montana, man is given "much room and inclination to do both our worst and our best."

The question of how and when to leave one's roots becomes more pressing as the journey progresses. Jick, who has left his sheep ranch in the hands of caretakers, must decide what to do with an operation he can no longer manage alone and which neither of his children wants to take over. Riley and Mariah, who have effected a tumultuous reconciliation, begin planning to move to the West Coast once the centennial is over. The future hangs in the balance: Will the last McCaskills leave the land or find a way to remain rooted in what has become known as "the last best place"?

In certain ways, Montana has come to embody what's left of the "West" as it once was known. But the history of the American West was written as a romance, and the romance has run its course. A more shameful picture has emerged, a story of despoliation and genocide, of exploitation, corruption and greed. As America enters the 21st Century, the West looks more and more like a big theme park. The outdoors has become little more than a backdrop for commercial, recreational activity.

Doig understands these issues better than most. He has steeped himself in Western history and written the sorts of books that don't romanticize the experience as much as present it in small-scale, human terms. He has written beautifully and with tenderness and humor of simple people who love the soil.

In the long run, all the "sad behavior" of man over the last hundred years can't erase hope for the future. Jick McCaskill doesn't sell out but manages to find a way to ensure that his ranch will pass to future generations in an unspoiled condition. Even Mariah recants on California and makes a continuing commitment to her roots, thus saving the McCaskills' attachment to the soil.

It seemed right that "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" should have ended on such a hopeful note. After all, Ivan Doig is the most hopeful of writers—not blindly optimistic but deeply humanistic. "He who owns the soil," he has written, "owns up to the sky."

In Montana, that's a big piece of heaven, something worth hanging on to.

"He was like a that it burns but not before everything ar

No one alive knew Elvis better than this author. He shared his life, and who now writes with more wit, candor, and affection. Even those who once called the Presleys white trash have mourned and worshipped still. Doig is a better considered Elvis's better half; he writes about his record and fecklessness; his mother's smothering love and alcoholism. From these seeds sprang Elvis Presley, American legend—musical superstar, devoted son, self-destructive pop icon.

"A frank, revealing reminiscence of The King of Rock 'n' Roll...
Intriguing insights."

—Kirkus Reviews

Packed with never-before-seen photos!

At bookstores now
DUTTON
Penguin USA

The Big Sky's the Limit

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAN MONTANA

By Ivan Doig
Atheneum. 324 pp. $18.95

By Susan Dodd

IVAN DOIG is a writer whose work makes readers recall why they love to read, reminds writers why they ever wanted to write in the first place. Doig's characters befriend you. His landscapes bowl you over. His novels lay whole worlds at your feet and invite you to make them your own.

Ride With Me, Mariah Montana is the final (alas) installment of a trilogy begun with English Creek (1984) and followed by Dancing at the Rascal Fair (1987). Readers of the first two volumes will likely find this ride worth the wait, but those who missed the earlier books shouldn't have any trouble keeping up with Mariah, either. This novel stands on its own.

And it stands, as well, apart. Ride With Me, Mariah Montana continues Jick McCaskill's account of his Scottish family, of their fruitful and spirited inhabitation of Montana's Two Medicine country. But it is 1989 now. McCaskills have lived within sight of Phantom Woman Mountain for about a century, Jick for 65 years, and the state of Montana is getting ready to make the most of its 100th birthday. English Creek, lined with willows, still curves down out of the mountains, but it lingers on the edges of a changed world, a world afflicted by "the longest epidemic of all, loss." You can still watch buffalo roam in Montana, provided you're willing to track them "from a motorhome the size of a small boxcar." You can still spot a bull elk, but it's mounted over a pasty-faced city editor's desk. Grizzly bears die of relocation. Entertainment is provided by "Montana's homegrown C-and-W group, The Roadkill Angels," and by the latest in t-shirt slogans—"Keep Montana Green, Shoot a Developer."

Susan Dodd's most recent book is Hell-Bent Men and Their Cities.

No wonder, then, Jick McCaskill has grown a little irritable, loss around him everywhere he looks: His beloved wife has recently died, and Jick is starting to suspect the hard business of ranching is getting to be too much for him. A nearby corporate ranch is licking its chops over the McCaskill land. Jick's hopes of keeping the ranch in the family were shot down three years ago with the divorce of his daughter Mariah and her husband, Riley Wright.

Feeling the reins of present and future slip from his hands, Jick is, more than ever, haunted by the past. ("Doesn't time know any statute of limitations, for Christ's sake?") And he is still trying to reassemble a rather crochety family history:

"Every family is a riddle . . . People on the outside can only glimpse enough to make them wonder what in the name of Jesus H. Christ is going on in there . . . while those inside the family have times, sometimes lifetimes, of being baffled with one another . . . parent and child . . . eyeing each other like foreign species. Knots in the bloodline. The oldest story there is, and ever the freshest."

Preoccupied, perhaps, with a lifetime of bafflement, Jick gets himself into a real predicament: Before we quite know what's got into him, he has signed on for a crisscross centennial tour of the sorry state of Montana with his daughter and her ex-husband. Riley and Mariah, still more than half in love with each other, work for a Missoula newspaper, he as a columnist ("Wright Angles"), she as a photographer. Their assignment, hard-won and loosely defined, is to piece together a portrait of Montana in all the rich contrariness of its hundredth year.

Ivan Doig

BY WAYNE ARNST

"Before we quite know what's got into him, he has signed on for a crisscross centennial tour of the sorry state of Montana."

Jick's Winnebago makes for mighty close quarters, as Riley and Mariah follow their noses. Such bickering, such chemistry . . . it's a scenario for Tracy and Hepburn. And there is Jick—"letting myself get just exactly where I knew not to get, between the pair of them"—digressing a blue streak and sputtering like Walter Brennan.

It is the sputter of Jick McCaskill's voice—cranky, confused, honest, stubborn and lovelorn—that orchestrates the journey, reconciles past and present and makes the whole novel sing. Ride With Me, Mariah Montana is, like its narrator, not without flaws. Old men tend to ramble, and this particular would-be codger has a weakness for one-liners that occasionally gets the better of him. Jick is so opinionated, especially where his daughter and her ex-husband are concerned, that Mariah and Riley remain a bit dim for a reader, overshadowed by the narrator's anxiety, aggravation and love. And these poetic columns of Riley's in a small-town paper? Such gloriously overshoot writing hasn't been seen since James Agee left Fortune magazine.

But Ivan Doig is a writer committed to plenty, and maybe plenitude always involves a touch of excess. Ride With Me, Mariah Montana is an extravagant celebration and, above all else, a love story. It is filled with devotion and passion for its locale, its people and their history, and smitten with the very language from which it is fashioned. It is, as journeys tend to be, a little episodic. But some of its turns and destinations are wonderfully surprising. And what a ride. I wouldn't have missed it for the world. ■

Ride
with Me,
Mariah
Montana
IVAN DOIG

A NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF ENGLISH CREEK
AND DANCING AT THE RASCAL FAIR

Meet Ivan Doig tomorrow on the Ave.

Meet this bestselling Northwest author at a book signing from 3 to 4:30 PM Friday, October 5, at our Main Store on the Ave.

His new book, Ride with Me, Mariah Montana, is the final novel in a trilogy which includes English Creek and Dancing at the Rascal Fair. It is also available at our store in Bellevue.

$18.95

Hardbound

General Books - First Floor

Since 1900

Open Thursday nights 'til 9. Park free. Use your bankcards.

University Book Store

4326 University Way N.E. • 634-3400.

*Seattle Times
10-4-90*

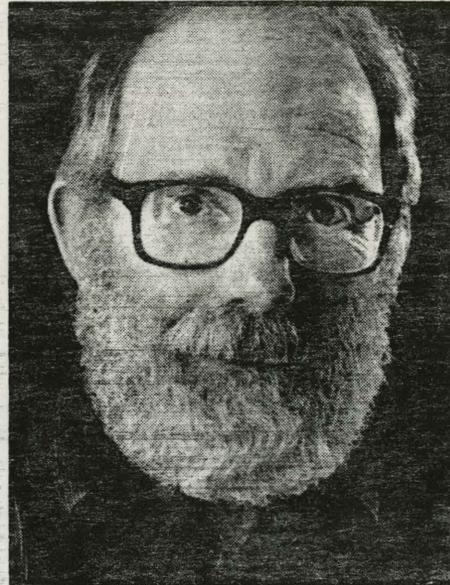

FICTION / Victoria Jenkins

Ridin' in the 'bago with Jick

Ride with Me, Mariah Montana
by Ivan Doig
(Atheneum, $18.95)

IT'S 1989, MONTANA'S CENTENNIAL SUMMER, and Jick McCaskill, familiar in a younger incarnation to readers of Ivan Doig's English Creek, is on the cusp of senior citizenship. A recent widower, he's reflecting on his past and trying to make peace with his loss and muster heart for whatever future he's got left. Jick reluctantly allows his photographer daughter, Mariah, to persuade him to accompany her and her former husband, Riley Wright, a newspaper columnist, on a monthlong odyssey criss-crossing the state in a Winnebago to collect material for a series of centennial articles. The journey is a contrivance designed to bring the reader and the characters into contact with the paradoxes of Montana's past and present, and to function as a springboard for Jick's "memory storms," as he calls his reminiscences. As such, we get a lot of McCaskill family history, and a Charles Kuralt-like sampling of vignettes from the road as the mismatched trio makes its sojourn.

Ride with Me, Mariah Montana—the final volume of Doig's Montana trilogy, following Dancing at the Rascal Fair and English Creek—chronicles the McCaskill family history from 1889, the year the territory became a state, to the present. Doig's romantic and sentimental affection for Montana is tempered with a wry acceptance of change: memories of haying with horse-drawn equipment play counterpoint to the present, where Jick "nukes" his dinner in the microwave oven in the Winnebago "camped" in an RV park. Riley jogs at dawn in a Lycra suit while Jick mourns that "maybe people from now on are going to exist on bean sprouts and wear polyester all over themselves, and lamb and wool belong behind glass in a museum. Maybe what I have known how to do in life, which is ranching, simply does not register any more."

Doig does Kuralt all across Montana.

Jick's narrative is occasionally interrupted by snatches of Riley's journalism, pieces the reader infers to be Doig's own voice. On the subject of Jick's Centennial Day speech, Riley writes, "His words climbed as he threw his head back to outspoke a gust. . . . Up through the black canyons of space, the sparks we utter; motes of word-fire that we glimpse leaving on their constellation flight, and call history."

The three principals are sometimes hard company to keep; they bicker incessantly in a sideshow of put-downs and wisecracks, pretending to disown vulnerability and tender feelings for each other—sentiments barely discernible behind their wordplay. Riley and Mariah have declared an uneasy truce as an expedient to a choice assignment, but as the miles roll by they argue themselves back into love. Jick worries about the wisdom of this re-alliance, and broods about the uncertain future of his ranch. The Winnebago is already crammed with conflict when Leona, Riley's widowed mother, joins the party and puts a new spin on Jick's reflections.

Still, Doig is so affectionate and good-natured, so patently fond of his characters, and is having such a field day with the language—turning nouns and adjectives into verbs (to travel in a motor home is to "bago"; writing for a newspaper is "piecing")—that the reader succumbs and goes along for the ride. The essential optimism that the book is imbued with leaves us hopeful that Jick, and Montana, will successfully adjust to the exigencies of change and loss. ■

Victoria Jenkins is a Seattle writer and screenwriter. Her book Relative Distances was published in August by Peregrine Smith.

TRAVEL / Jean Lenihan

Prisoners of politesse

The Early Arrival of Dreams: A Year in China
by Rosemary Mahoney
Fawcett Columbine, $18.95

SINCE CHINA "OPENED ITS DOORS to the West" in 1979, we've had a lot to catch up on. It's natural, then, that the kind of travel writing that's come out of China in the past decade has been a blending of history writing and personal reflection, with as much sociological, anthropological, and ethnological data as could be squeezed between the covers. But after the massacre of student demonstrators in Tiananmen Square in June 1989, publishers were suddenly clamoring to bring us faces and stories.

The Early Arrival of Dreams, Rosemary Mahoney's account of her year as an English-language teacher at Hangzhou University in 1987-1988, is being advertised as "China—the year before death," but it's neither an I-saw-it-coming flashback nor a sentimental portrait of China's student population.

Early Arrival is travel writing in the tradition of the novel. Mahoney, an award-winning short-story writer, shapes her experience into the tale of one hard year in Hangzhou, with short side trips to Shanghai and Tokyo. As difficult as things g

MONTANA
Historical Society
Museum Store
Catalog, 1990–1991

DeWayne Williams
MONTANA TRIBUTE

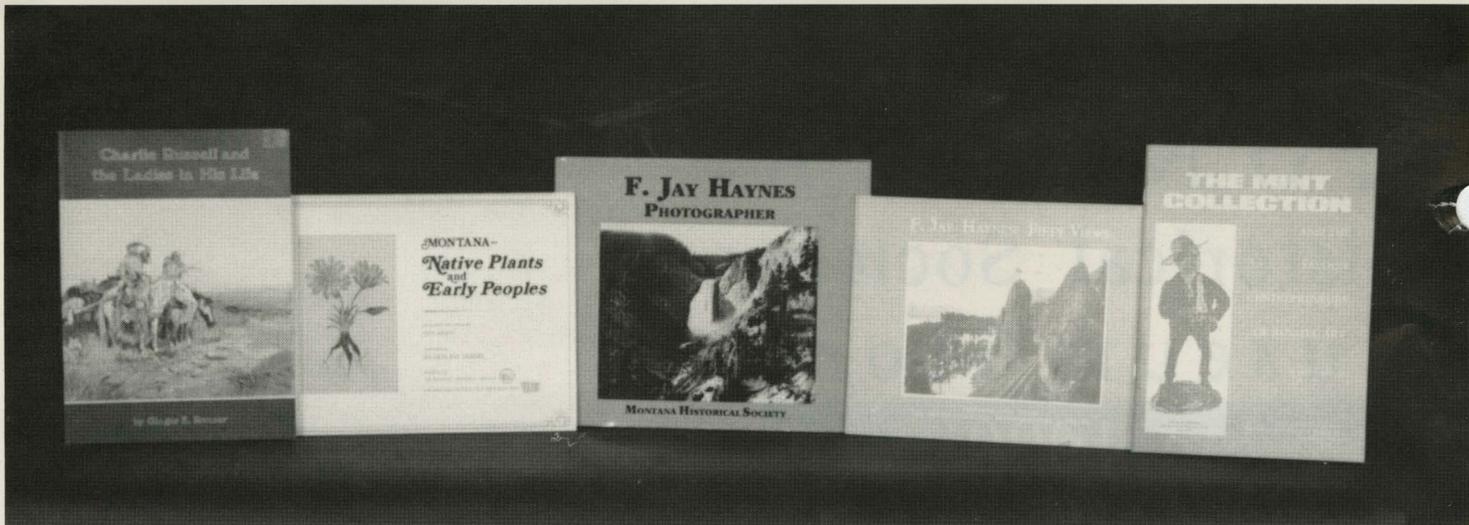

Quotations by A.B. Guthrie Jr.

OFFICIAL COMMEMORATIVE LIMITED EDITION

To order Montana Tribute, a photographic celebration of the state's centennial, see page four.

Montana Historical Society Press

C. M. RUSSELL

The Mackay Collection

A biography of the cowboy artist and a commentary on many of his works of art. Excellent reproductions of the oils, watercolors, bronzes, and drawings in the Montana Historical Society's Mackay Collection of C. M. Russell art.

28 pages (2524) Paperback, $3.50

THE MINT COLLECTION

And the Saloon Entrepreneurs of Russell Art

During the 1890s the Mint Saloon in Great Falls, Montana, housed a collection of Charles M. Russell art. The text and reproductions in this portfolio document the collection and what happened to it.

22 pages (9580) Paperback, $1.50

A TRAVELER'S COMPANION TO MONTANA HISTORY

Carroll Van West

An indispensable guide to Montana's historical landscapes, ideal for armchair reading or for daypack or glovebox reference. Illustrated with maps and historical and contemporary photographs.

240 pages (9203) Paperback, $9.95
2nd printing—available March 1, 1991

CHARLIE RUSSELL AND THE LADIES IN HIS LIFE

Ginger K. Renner

In this ground-breaking essay, Russell authority Ginger Renner describes the important women in the life of C. M. Russell and the impact they had on his art. Illustrated with a portfolio of 22 full-color reproductions of Russell's works that feature women.

32 pages (2526) Paperback, $3.25

MONTANA'S HISTORICAL HIGHWAY MARKERS

Compiled by Glenda Clay Bradshaw from original text by Robert H. Fletcher
Since the 1930s, Montana's roadside markers have given travelers light-hearted and colloquial descriptions of historical sites across the state. All 156 signs have been faithfully reproduced and illustrated in this delightful book with drawings by cowboy artist Irvin "Shorty" Shope.

70 pages (5209) Paperback, $8.95

F. JAY HAYNES, PHOTOGRAPHER

Montana Historical Society

160 photographs by F. Jay Haynes of an era of change in the Northern Rockies. Images range from the photographer's early work in Minnesota to his turn-of-the-century views of Yellowstone National Park.

192 pages (9201) Hardcover, $24.95
Sale Price $14.95

FRONTIER-PIONEER MONTANA

A Historic Montana Map Dedicated to the Old Timers

A reprint of the original 1937 Montana history map created by Robert H. Fletcher and Irvin "Shorty" Shope.

36" x 28" (7941) $4.95 (Postage $2.50)

F. JAY HAYNES: FIFTY VIEWS Photographs from the Haynes Collection

Montana Historical Society

A broad sampling of photographer F. Jay Haynes' work chronicling the rapidly changing Midwest and Northwest from 1876 through the turn of the century.

32 pages (6104) Paperback, $4.95

Montana Historical Society Press

WELLS FARGO

Stagecoaching in Montana Territory

W. Turrentine Jackson

The story of the Wells Fargo and Company in Montana and its effects on territorial growth

63 pages (9582) Paperback, $2.75

THE GIBRALTAR

Socialism and Labor in Butte, Montana, 1895-1920

Jerry W. Calvert

The story of the socialist insurgency in Butte, Montana, the toughest mining town in the West and one of the few cities in America to be governed by the Socialist party. Calvert captures the drama and color of Butte's labor wars and the city's flamboyant personalities.

191 pages (9205) Hardcover, $21.95

NO STEP BACKWARD

Women and Family on the Rocky Mountain Mining Frontier, Helena, Montana, 1865-1900

Paula Petrik

The fascinating story of late nineteenth-century prostitutes, entrepreneurs, reformers, suffragists, and middle-class women in Helena, Montana, a dynamic mining town on the Rocky Mountain frontier. Illustrated with historical photographs. "...replete with marvelous details about the lives of Helena's women."—Pacific Northwest Quarterly

206 pages (9210) Paperback, $12.95
(9204) Hardcover, $19.95

THE CONREY PLACER MINING COMPANY

A Pioneer Gold-Dredging Enterprise in Montana, 1897-1922

Clark C. Spence

The dredges of the Conrey Placer Mining Company worked the ground near Virginia City, Montana, for almost twenty-five years. The Conrey Company experimented with massive equipment and used innovative techniques to pull millions of dollars in gold out of Alder Gulch. This important business history is certain to become a standard reference work. Richly illustrated with historical photographs.

148 pages (9209) Hardcover, $19.95

THE MONTANA FRONTIER

Merrill G. Burlingame

Published in 1942, The Montana Frontier set a new standard for writing regional history. In his well-researched and highly readable text, Burlingame discusses Indian life, fur trade, mining camps, cattle business, early churches, and pioneer settlement.

416 pages (4579) Paperback, $7.95

YELLOWSTONE PLACE NAMES

Lee H. Whittlesey

With this book in hand, visitors and park enthusiasts will see a Yellowstone National Park they have never seen before—the landscape of Yellowstone place names. Whittlesey presents the well-researched history of over 650 place names and recounts delightful stories of trappers, explorers, rangers, and visitors to the park. Illustrated with historic photographs by park photographer F. Jay Haynes, foreword by Tim Manns, park historian.

200 pages (9206) Paperback, $11.95
Unabridged (9208) Microfiche, $8.95

THE LAST BEST PLACE

A Montana Anthology

William Kittredge and Annick Smith, editors

In celebration of Montana's statehood centennial, William Kittredge, Annick Smith, and a distinguished board of editors assembled a collection of over 250 stories, poems, essays, journals, and oral histories by 150 writers, including Lewis and Clark, Osborne Russell, Arapooish, Dashiell Hammett, Ivan Doig, James Welch, Mary Clearman Blew, A. B. Guthrie, Thomas McGuane, Richard Ford, Richard Hugo, Sandra Alcosser, and Paul Zarzyski. Essential reading for everyone who loves good literature, the anthology is handsomely illustrated by woodcuts created for the book by Montana artists. Now in its third printing.

1,184 pages
(9207) Hardcover, $45.00 ($3.50 postage)
(9211) Paperback, $22.50 ($2.50 postage)

MONTANA—NATIVE PLANTS AND EARLY PEOPLES

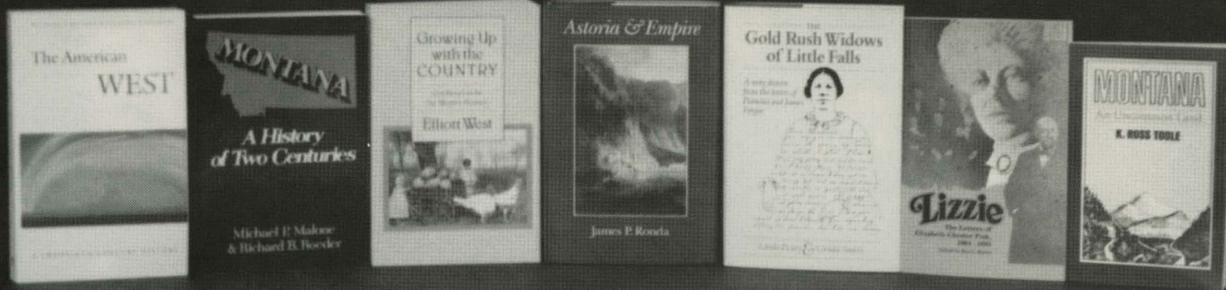

Jeff Hart

Illustrated by Jacqueline Moore

This fascinating and informative classic describes the early uses of native Montana plants by Native Americans and other early inhabitants of the area. Entries are arranged alphabetically with a description of the plant and its habitat, a discussion of its use, and an illustration.

76 pages (1709) Paperback, $5.95

Western History

TEN TOUGH TRIPS

Writers and the West

William W. Bevis

The land is the inland west, particularly Montana, and the trips are literary journeys made by ten writers ranging from James Fenimore Cooper to James Welch. In a series of lucid and witty essays, Bevis, a professor of English at the University of Montana, uses their works to explore the conflict between the mythic West of European yearnings—a natural paradise free of all civilized constraints—and the real complications and austerities of Montana.

248 pages (4585) Hardcover, $24.95

ASTORIA AND EMPIRE

James P. Ronda

Ronda's book is the first modern account and assessment of John Jacob Astor's fur-trading enterprise. Richly detailed, it teems with Indians of many tribes and an international cast of traders, naval officers, diplomats, and rogues. Astoria and Empire draws on important archival sources only recently discovered, including Duncan McDougall's journal, which allow the reconstruction of daily life at Astoria.

400 pages (4547) Hardcover, $26.95

GROWING UP WITH THE COUNTRY

Childhood on the Far Western Frontier

Elliott West

In this beautifully written book, historian Elliott West uses diaries, journals, letters, novels, and reminiscences to examine the lives of children on the frontier. The author shows how the experiences of these children differed significantly from those of their parents and prepared them to shape the culture and institutions of the modern West.

343 pages (4301) Paperback, $16.95

THE GOLD RUSH WIDOWS OF LITTLE FALLS

Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith

In the late 1850s and early 1860s the Minnesota frontier town of Little Falls struggled for survival in the face of floods, conflicts with Indians, and a troubled economy. Many of the men of Little Falls had left the town—and their families—for the goldfields of Colorado and Montana. Based primarily on the letters of Pamela and James Fergus, The Gold Rush Widows of Little Falls provides a moving portrait of struggling families.

304 pages (5223) Hardcover, $29.95
(5220) Paperback, $14.95

AN UNCOMMON LAND

K. Ross Toole

One of Montana's most eloquent historians writes with intelligence, wit, and a keen perspective on the important events that have shaped the political and cultural life of the state. A classic volume on the history of Montana.

320 pages (4569) Paperback, $8.95

LIZZIE

The Letters of Elizabeth Chester Fisk, 1864-1893

Rex C. Myers, editor

Lizzie Fisk arrived in Helena, Montana, in 1867 to begin life in the mining town with her journalist husband, Robert. Over the next twenty-five years, in letters to her family in Connecticut, Lizzie Fisk provides a fascinating look at one of the most important eras in Montana's history.

170 pages (4629) Paperback, $12.95

MONTANA

Our Land and People

William Lang and Rex C. Myers

In this eminently readable book, historians Lang and Myers tell the story of Montana from prehistory to the last gubernatorial election. Now available in its second edition.

261 pages (4574) Hardcover, $22.95

A HISTORY OF TWO CENTURIES

Michael P. Malone and

Richard B. Roeder

The most complete history written about Montana, this book is a valuable resource for those interested in the state's development.

352 pages (4576) Paperback, $14.95

THE AMERICAN WEST

A Twentieth-Century History

Michael P. Malone and

Richard W. Etulain

In this valuable new book, historians Malone and Etulain present the first comprehensive history of the American West in the twentieth century. This exhaustively researched and eloquently written book describes the West as a dynamic, culturally rich region that is ripe for intellectual discourse and discovery.

360 pages (4310) Paperback, $12.95

(4311) Hardcover, $31.50

TWENTIETH CENTURY

A State of Extremes

K. Ross Toole

Photographs of people and places complement Toole's vivid and enthralling account of Montana's often turbulent history since the turn of the century.

304 pages (4562) Paperback, $12.95

Montana & the West

THE BUTTE IRISH

Class and Ethnicity in an American Mining Town, 1875-1925

David W. Emmons

In his well-researched study, historian David Emmons describes and analyzes life in Montana's premier hardrock mining town. Emmons describes how the Irish built a community in Butte, how they worked, and how they survived. A compelling history of class and ethnicity.

410 pages (4621) Paperback, $15.95

THE MONTANA RAILROAD

Nicknamed, "The Jawbone"

Don Baker

The Montana Railroad, succeeded by the Milwaukee Railroad, served central Montana for nearly a century and was one of the few railroads that operated with steam, electric, and diesel power. It connected with the Great Northern Railway at Lewistown and the Northern Pacific at Lombard.

95 pages (4504) Hardcover, $14.95

RUNAWAY

Mary Clearman Blew

The stories in Runaway place in proper perspective incidents in the lives of women and men in contemporary Montana as they struggle with the weather, physical adversities, and the tatters of the myth of the West that shapes and often distorts the vision.

215 pages (5190) Paperback, $8.95

A BRIDE GOES WEST

Nannie T. Alderson and Helena Huntington Smith

One woman's perspective on life during the late 1800s in southeastern Montana. This poignant and moving story is told with sincerity and compassion for the people, their values, and the land.

273 pages (4004) Paperback, $6.95

COWBOY TALES

Jon Tuska, editor

Cowboy Tales are classic literary depictions of the West illustrated with captivating photographs of today's cowboys. The ideal book for pioneer spirits and cowboys at heart, Cowboy Tales includes Mark Twain's "Buck Fanshaws Funeral," S. Omar Barker's "Outlaw Trail," Bret Harte's "The Outcasts of Poker Flats," O. Henry's "A Call Loan," Conrad Richter's "Lutie," John Steinbeck's "The Leader of the People," and Max Brand's "Wine on the Desert."

85 pages (5175) Hardcover, $10.95

LETTERS OF A WOMAN

HOMESTEADER

Elinore Pruitt Stewart

The unforgettable story of a woman homesteader who proved she could do it on her own. The critically acclaimed 1980 film Heartland was based on Elinore Pruitt Stewart's letters and journals.

282 pages (4006) Paperback, $7.95

RICK O'SHAY, HIPSHOT, AND ME

A Memoir by Stan Lynde

Introduction by Charlton Heston

An autobiographical text plus 10 complete stories from the daily comic strip created by the cartoonist from 1959 through 1977. Lynde introduces each story with a brief explanatory essay about the history and meaning of the comic strip.

250 pages (5029) Paperback, $18.95

IVAN DOIG

Ivan Doig writes about the fictional McCaskill family in a trilogy that spans the years from late 1890 to 1989. The setting for the three books is the Two Medicine country south of Glacier Park on the east face of the Rockies.

ENGLISH CREEK

Ivan Doig

English Creek is set in the 1930's.

343 pages (5018) Paperback, $7.95

DANCING AT THE RASCAL FAIR

Ivan Doig

Dancing at the Rascal Fair is about the Rocky Mountain frontier in the late nineteenth century.

182 pages (5085) Hardcover, $18.95
(5173) Paperback, $8.95

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH

MONTANA

Ivan Doig

The trilogy ends with the story brought forward to 1989, Montana's centennial summer. Jick McCaskill—facing age and loss, his prized ranch beset by outside interests—is jumpstarted back into adventure and escapade by a red-headed newspaper photographer named Mariah.

324 pages (5051) Hardcover, $18.95

THIS HOUSE OF SKY

Ivan Doig

With piercing clarity and artistry, Doig reflects on growing up in Montana's Shields Valley and along the Rocky Mountain front. Doig's writing exhibits the warmth and sensitivity he feels for the land and the people who shaped his values.

324 pages (4505) Paperback, $5.95

Discovering Montana & the West

MONTANA TRIBUTE

DeWayne Williams

Montana's official commemorative limited edition of one hundred black-and-white photographs of unusual and interesting people, places, things, and events from Montana's centennial year

350 pages (1773) Hardcover, $50.00

MONTANA FROM THE BIG SKY

Larry Mayer

A labor of love by Billings Gazette photographer Larry Mayer, who has flown over the vast Montana landscape for eight years to compile this special perspective. NBC Anchor Tom Brokaw adds his travel-sharpened impression of Mayer's unique view of Montana.

144 pages, 140 color photographs
(1775) Paperback, $29.95

CHRISTMASTIME IN MONTANA

collected by Dave Walter

125 years of Montana holidays with colorful, contemporary Christmas and winter-landscape photography combine for a warm look back at memorable Montana Christmases from 1864 to today, as recorded in memoirs, letters, and newspapers.

128 pages, 80 color photographs
(1776) Paperback, $19.95

MONTANA IS . . .

Verse and photography by Mike Logan

Well-known Montana author and photographer Mike Logan illustrates his popular poem, "Montana Is . . .," with beautiful color photography.

96 pages, 140 color photos
(1016) Paperback, $11.95

MONTANA ON MY MIND

Photography by Mike Sample and Larry Mayer

Images of Montana landscapes, waterways, and wildlife celebrate the state's beauty, heritage, and pride. Over 200 color photographs are accompanied by quotations from Mike Mansfield, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., Norman Maclean, Charles M. Russell, and other famous Montanans.

120 pages (1027) Hardcover, $29.50

SECRETS IN YELLOWSTONE & GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARKS

Lorraine Salem Tufts

Sixteen of the country's best wildlife and landscape photographers capture thrilling and touching scenes in two of our best-loved parks. All photos are accompanied by identifying text and photographic information. This national award-winning book is a wonderful addition to the photographic documentation of our national parks.

86 pages (1772) Hardcover, $29.95
82 pages (1769) Paperback, $19.95

SYMBOLS OF MONTANA

Rex C. Myers and Norma B. Ashby

What is Montana's official state fish? What does the state seal symbolize? You can find answers to these and other questions about Montana symbols in this popular book.

32 pages (4537) Paperback, $3.50

NAMES ON THE FACE OF MONTANA

Roberta Carkeek Cheney

This informative guide to place names of Montana, includes histories of familiar and unfamiliar names and the colorful events linked to their origins.

300 pages (1508) Paperback, $9.95

WE MONTANANS

Norma Tirrell

Foreword by A. B. Guthrie, Jr.

For this centennial publication, Tirrell asked a cross-section of Montanans why they live under the Big Sky, why they stay, and what makes them distinctly "Montanan." Their answers are an eloquent tribute to a beautiful state. Full-color photographs.

160 pages (1031) Hardcover, $17.95
150 pages (1030) Paperback, $12.95

MONTANA!

A Photographic Celebration

Volume 1

Rick Graetz

Montana landmarks and breathtaking scenery come to life in Rick Graetz' color photographic tribute to Montana.

104 pages (1032) Hardcover, $19.95
104 Pages (1033) Paperback, $13.95

MONTANA!

A Photographic Celebration

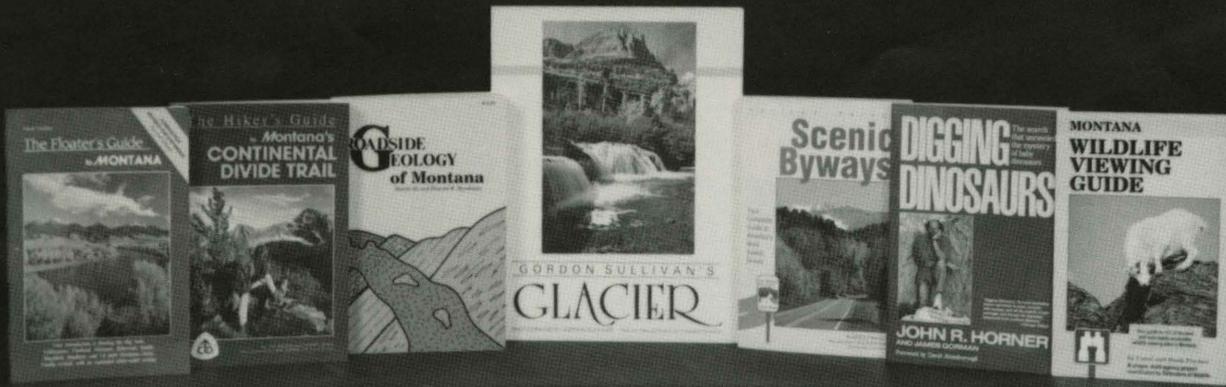

Volume 2

Rick Graetz

Notes by A. B. Guthrie, Jr.

The second volume of stunning photographs of Montana will delight all those who love the Big Sky. A wonderful collection of full-color photographs of Montana's prairies, mountains, and wildlife.

104 pages (1040) Hardcover $19.95
104 pages (1041) Paperback, $13.95

Discovering Montana & the West

Guide Books

SCENIC BYWAYS

Beverly Magley

Driving for pleasure has been the number one form of outdoor recreation in the United States for many years. Now, the National Scenic Byways Program promotes driving on America's most scenic highways. Many of the routes are through national forests, where the U. S. Forest Service has officially designated "scenic byways." full-color cover, 58 b&w photos

(1727) Paperback, $9.95

ROADSIDE HISTORY OF YELLOWSTONE PARK

Winfred Blevins

Enrich your next trip to Yellowstone National Park with this informative guide to some of wonderland's best-known places. Includes descriptions of the park and stories from its past.

106 pages (1763) Paperback, $7.95

ROADSIDE GEOLOGY OF MONTANA

David Alt and Donald Hyndham

A new edition of the essential guide to Montana's roadside geology presents new interpretations of the origins of the Rocky Mountains based on the latest theories of plate tectonics. Detailed maps, diagrams, and photographs.

435 pages (1828) Paperback, $12.95

GORDON SULLIVAN'S GLACIER

Denise Pizzini and Gordon Sullivan

Butte native Gordon Sullivan has spent many years exploring the Rocky Mountains and photographing Glacier National Park. 100 of his beautiful photographs accompanied by excerpts from his journals present beautiful Glacier at its most seductive.

120 pages (1765) Paperback, $14.95

GREAT ESCAPES

Montana's State Parks

Rick Newby

Twenty-eight of Montana's state parks are described in this informative and attractive book. Includes a directory of Montana's state parks and 60 color plates.

80 pages (1548) Paperback, $9.95

MONTANA NATIONAL FORESTS

Gary Ferguson

Montana National Forests is a lively, informative guide to a sweeping expanse of public land. Full-color photos, fact-filled text, and a directory to recreational opportunities within each national forest, 109 color photos

128 pages (1749) Paperback, $14.95

DIGGING DINOSAURS

John R. Horner and James Gorman
Foreword by David Attenborough

Paleontologist Jack Horner describes his remarkable discoveries of dinosaur fossils in Montana's badlands. Horner's new theories about dinosaur life and the reasons for their longevity have changed the way we think about these fascinating creatures.

210 pages (1553) Hardcover, $17.95

YELLOWSTONE ON FIRE!

Staff of the Billings Gazette

For more than three months in 1988, the staff of the Billings Gazette covered the fires that blazed through Yellowstone National Park. These journalists and photographers remained in the Park day after day, reporting on the 13 major fires and asking the hard questions about the controversial "let it burn" policy.

128 pages (1036) Paperback, $12.95

MONTANA WILDLIFE VIEWING GUIDE

Carol and Hank Fischer

This comprehensive guide to accessible prime wildlife viewing sites, includes a map, general descriptions of and detailed access information to sites as well as a list of wildlife species and the best season and time of day to see them. 40 color photos

104 pages, (1710) Paperback, $5.95

Montana is a recreation paradise. Whatever your sport, you'll find your share of the action with these six guide books.

CLIMBER'S GUIDE TO MONTANA

Pat Caffrey

237 pages (1714) Paperback, $9.95

ANGLER'S GUIDE TO MONTANA

Michael S. Sample

244 pages (1747) Paperback, $9.95

FLOATER'S GUIDE TO MONTANA

Hank Fischer

140 pages (1522) Paperback, $8.95

HIKER'S GUIDE TO MONTANA

Bill Schneider

250 pages (1746) Paperback, $9.95

YELLOWSTONE TRAILS: OFFICIAL HIKING GUIDE TO YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK

b&w photos and maps

120 pages, (1757) Paperback, $4.95

HIKER'S GUIDE TO MONTANA'S CONTINENTAL DIVIDE TRAIL

Tad Brooks and Sherry Jones

35 b&w photos

256 pages (1521) Paperback, $9.95

Lewis & Clark

THE JOURNALS OF LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION, VOLUME 6, November 2, 1805–March 22, 1806

The first five volumes of the new edition of the Journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition have been widely heralded as a lasting achievement in the study of western exploration. The sixth volume begins on November 2, 1805, in the second year of Meriwether Lewis and William Clark's epic journey. It covers the last leg of the party's route from the Cascades of the Columbia River to the Pacific Coast and their stay at Fort Clatsop, near the river's mouth, until the spring of 1806.

531 pages (4318) Hardcover, $50.00

Also available

ATLAS OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION

196 pages (4145) Hardcover, $100.00

THE JOURNALS OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION, VOLUME 2, August 30, 1803–August 24, 1804

612 pages (4090) Hardcover, $50.00

THE JOURNALS OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION, VOLUME 3, August 25, 1804–April 6, 1805

544 pages (4091) Hardcover, $50.00

THE JOURNALS OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION, VOLUME 4, April 7–July 27, 1805

464 pages (4189) Hardcover, $50.00

THE JOURNALS OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION, VOLUME 5, July 28–November 1, 1805

415 pages (4245) Hardcover, $50.00

THE JOURNALS OF LEWIS AND CLARK

Bernard DeVoto, editor

A one-volume abridgement of the record of an exploration unique in American history. DeVoto's edition, published by the American Heritage Library, is considered one of the most reliable and readable transcriptions of the great nineteenth-century chronicle.

504 pages (4119) Paperback, $10.95

THE WAY TO THE WESTERN SEA Lewis and Clark Across the Continent

David Lavender

A distinguished historian of the West dramatically recounts the story of one of the greatest adventures in American history. Using new evidence, Lavender takes an in-depth look at the members of the expedition, their encounters with Indians along the way, and their struggles to find the headwaters of the Columbia River.

444 pages (4289) Hardcover, $22.95

AMONG THE SLEEPING GIANTS Occasional Pieces on Lewis and Clark

Donald Jackson

Lewis and Clark authority Donald Jackson details the art and craft of editing the documentary collection of letters that led to the 1962 revival of scholarship on the Voyage of Discovery. Illustrated.

136 pages (4190) Hardcover, $17.95

LEWIS AND CLARK Pioneering Naturalists

Paul Russell Cutright

The most comprehensive account of the scientific findings of Meriwether Lewis and William Clark during their journey from St. Louis to the Pacific Ocean in 1804-1806.

504 pages (4286) Paperback, $14.95

THE HISTORY OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION

Elliott Coues, editor

This authoritative record of the Lewis and Clark Expedition is presented in three volumes. Volume I: April 30, 1803-June 7, 1805. Volume II: June 8, 1805-March 22, 1806. Volume III: March 22, 1806-September 23, 1806. This 1,363-page compilation contains maps, reports, memoirs, and index.

Vol. I (4114) Paperback, $8.50

Vol. II (4115) Paperback, $8.50

Vol. III (4116) Paperback, $8.50

LEWIS AND CLARK AMONG THE INDIANS

James P. Ronda

A fascinating study of the Lewis and Clark expedition as a cooperative venture that depended on the Indians for everything from food to fuel to maps.

298 pages (4122) Hardcover, $24.95

(4225) Paperback, $8.95

SACAJAWEA

Harold P. Howard

Journalist Harold Howard retraces Sacajawea's path across the Northwest with the Lewis and Clark Expedition. A well-written and colorful account that objectively examines this remarkable Shoshoni woman's life after the expedition ended.

214 pages (5502) Paperback, $8.95

SACAGAWEA OF THE LEWIS & CLARK EXPEDITION

Ella E. Clark and Margot Edmonds

An informative examination of the life of Sacagawea, the Shoshoni woman who traveled with the Lewis and Clark Expedition. The authors look at Sacagawea's life after the expedition and present evidence of her death in 1884.

171 pages (5501) Paperback, $9.95

Custer

SON OF THE MORNING STAR: CUSTER AND THE LITTLE BIGHORN

Evan Connell

By concerning himself with people and their societies and how they express themselves through the events of history, Connell reinforces the fascination with Custer's Last Stand.

441 pages (5017) Paperback, $10.95

CUSTER DIED FOR YOUR SINS

Vine Deloria

In his new preface to this quality paperback edition, the author observes, "The Indian would have changed so substantially since the first publication of this book that some things contained in it seem new again." Indeed, it seems each generation will have to read and reread Vine Deloria's Manifesto for some time to come, before we absorb his special, ironic, Indian point of view.

This book should be a must-read for all Americans.

267 pages (4224) $8.95

KEEP THE LAST BULLET FOR YOURSELF

The True Story of Custer's Last Stand

By Thomas B. Marquis

Introduction by Joseph Medicine Crow

Preface by Herman J. Viola

A reprint of the controversial account of an obscure physician who interviewed some of the Indians who fought at the Battle of the Little Bighorn.

205 pages (4261) Paperback, $7.95

CUSTER'S FALL

The Indian Side of the Story

David Humphreys Miller

Based on the accounts from 71 Indians who actually fought in the Battle of the Little Bighorn, this astonishing chronicle sheds new light on one of the bloodiest days in the history of the western frontier.

271 pages (4070) Paperback, $7.95

OLD NEUTRIMENT

Memories of the Custers

Glendolin Damon Wagner

Introduction by Brian W. Dippie

Old Neutriment was George Custer's orderly for nine years and may have known him better than anyone but Elizabeth Custer. An intimate look at how the Custers lived and the orderly's trip with Custer to the Battle of the Little Bighorn. First published in 1934.

256 pages (4270) Paperback, $7.95

ARCHAEOLOGICAL PERSPECTIVES ON THE BATTLE OF THE LITTLE BIGHORN

Douglas D. Scott, Richard A. Fox, Jr.,
Melissa A. Connor, and Dick Harmon

What really happened on that bright summer day in June 1876, when George Custer died on the hill above the Little Big Horn River? After an archaeological examination of the battlefield in 1984-1985, four experts in military archaeology and firearms interpret the new evidence and solve some of the mysteries surrounding that famous battle.

309 pages (4634) Hardcover, $24.95

Charles M. Russell

CHARLES M. RUSSELL

Peter H. Hassrick

Charlie Russell came to Montana in 1880 to share the lives of the mountain men, the cowboys and the wranglers-the independent men who lived the West of Russell's imagination. Using new research, Hassrick presents an illuminating study of some of Russell's best work. Illustrated with full-color reproductions.

155 pages (2566) Hardcover, $39.95

TRAILS PLOWED UNDER

Stories of the Old West

Charles M. Russell

Introduction by Will Rogers

Back in Print

This popular book, written and illustrated by Charlie Russell, is a collection of authentic incidents written as humorous stories about an old-time cow wrangler.

210 pages (2539) Hardcover, $24.95

RECOLLECTIONS OF CHARLEY RUSSELL

By Frank B. Linderman

Shortly after the death of his friend Charley Russell, Linderman recorded these random, nostalgic, and humorous recollections.

148 pages (2562) Paperback, $10.95

WESTERN ART OF CHARLES M. RUSSELL

Lanning Aldrich, editor

Introduction by Vivian A. Paladin

Forty-five of the cowboy artist's paintings are reproduced in this best-selling book about Russell and his art.

417 pages (2534) Paperback, $14.95

Native American Studies

MONTANA INDIANS: YESTERDAY AND TODAY

William L. Bryan Jr.
Photographs by Michael Crummett

The collective insights of author and photographer bring together images of Indian culture and tradition that illuminate the diverse and rich history of Montana Indians.

144 pages (1014) Paperback, $13.95

THE FEATHERED SUN

Frithjof Schuon
Introduction by Thomas Yellowtail

Regarded in Europe as one of the foremost authorities on religion, Frithjof Schuon's lifelong association with the Plains Indians has culminated in this comprehensive comparative study of Indian and non-Indian religions.

170 pages (5531) Paperback, $25.00

WAR DANCE

Plains Indian Musical Performance
William Powers

The Indian powwow, with its colorful war dance, is among the most vital aspects of American Indian culture. William Powers has witnessed both the traditions and trends in Plains Indian music and dance over the past thirty years, and here encapsulates his long career in what may be the first book that deals with Plains Indian musical culture as a unit.

200 pages (5560) Hardback, $24.95

THE SPIRIT OF NATIVE AMERICA Beauty of Mysticism in American Indian Art

Anna Lee Walters

From eagle bone whistles to beaded moccasins, the everyday and ceremonial objects created by Native Americans over the centuries are unsurpassed in their beauty and originality. In this stunning book—much of it in full color—Walters authoritatively describes tribal traditions with photographs of nearly 250 artifacts.

120 pages (2569) Paperback, $16.95

SITTING BULL Champion of the Sioux

Stanley Vestal
Foreword by Raymond J. DeMallie

This authoritative book goes beyond the legend to tell the true story of Sitting Bull, the great Sioux warrior and statesman. Learn about Sitting Bull's fight to help his people and retain his dignity in the midst of the awful change that altered forever life on the frontier.

346 pages (5642) Paperback, $12.95

"I WILL FIGHT NO MORE FOREVER" Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce War

Merrill D. Beal
During the summer and fall of 1877, hundreds of nontreaty Nez Perce Indians fled from the military through Idaho and Montana, only to find defeat near the Canadian border. Historian Beal tells about the history of these people, describes their leaders, and gives us an insightful perspective on the war and its consequences. Essential reading.

366 pages (5543) Paperback, $10.95

THE SACRED PIPE Black Elk's Account of the Seven Rites of the Oglala Sioux

Joseph Epes Brown, editor

Black Elk was the last holy man to know the religious rites of the Lakota Sioux. Over a period of several years, anthropologist and historian Brown lived with Black Elk, recording his knowledge of the tribe's religion and preserving it in this faithful translation.

143 pages (5641) Paperback, $7.95

CROWFOOT Chief of the Blackfeet

Hugh A. Dempsey
Foreword by Paul E. Sharp

Crowfoot was an important Blackfeet chief who served his people as orator, peace-maker, and diplomat on the Canadian-American frontier. In this sensitive and well-written biography, historian Hugh Dempsey uses oral history and his considerable knowledge of the Blackfeet tribe to examine the life of this enigmatic Indian leader.

226 pages (5646) Paperback, $9.95

THE MYTHS OF THE NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS

Lewis Spence

Anthropologist and folklorist Spence presents the myths and legends of the many tribes of North America. Ranging from stories about love to tales of rivalry and war, the myths tell us a great deal about the lives and character of these people. Map and illustrations.

393 pages (5635) Paperback, $8.95

Calendars

C. M. RUSSELL ENGAGEMENT CALENDAR, 1991

A full-color wall calendar that reproduces some of Russell's best-loved works, including Return of the Horse Thieves, Innocent Allies, The Elk, and Paydirt.
9" x 12" (8330) $5.95

NATIONAL FORESTS, 1991

This is the only calendar to feature the grandeur of our National Forests. It features 14 spectacular images of recreation, wildlife, and scenery found in our national forests. Part of the proceeds goes to help the conservation programs of the American Forestry Association.
9" x 12" (8301) $7.95

THE MONTANA CALENDAR, 1991

Enjoy some of the most spectacular places in Montana with this full-color wall calendar, illustrated by photographer Mike Sample. Each photo is accompanied by an informative description of the location and its importance to Montana.
9" x 12" (8332) $4.95

BIG SKY COUNTRY ENGAGEMENT CALENDAR, 1991

Dan Sample's full-color photographs show us the Montana that we all want to come home to. Enjoy a different breathtaking scene each month.
9" x 12" (8331) $5.95

THE NATURE CONSERVANCY CALENDAR 1991

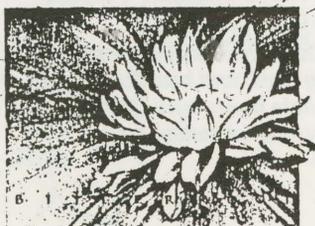

The new calendar contains 36 color photos and eight pieces of color art of Nature Conservancy preserves and the plants and animals living in this critical habitat. Plus, every photo is accompanied by long educational captions. The images come from the cameras of America's best landscape and wildlife photographers. Part of the proceeds from this calendar go to preserve ecological diversity all over the world.
11" x 11" (8302) $9.95

MONTANA HISTORY CALENDAR Trivia Edition, 1991

Begin each day with a fascinating piece of Montana's past. Illustrated with historic photographs, this calendar features a short story for each day of the year. Collect yours or give a "piece of history" to a friend.
9" x 12" (8315) $5.95

THE MONTANA WILDFLOWERS PERPETUAL CALENDAR

Karen Leigh Noice and Gini Ogle's beautiful calendar is done in calligraphy with water colored wildflowers, and can be used year after year. It enables you to enter your significant events to become part of the art work.
4 1/2" x 20" (8334) $9.95

The West in Poetry

100 YEARS IN POETRY (1889-1989) The Montana Poet

The poems that are contained within these pages are a product of love, respect, pride, honor and dedication to the Great State of Montana, its people and their way of life.
111 pages (4506) Paperback, $19.85

BRONC TO BREAKFAST

Mike Logan

Mike Logan captures the essence of ranch life in this collection of poems. Logan has been a featured poet at the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, Nevada, and he has participated in cowboy poetry gatherings throughout the West and Canada.
80 pages (5184) Paperback, $6.95

COWBOY POETRY A GATHERING

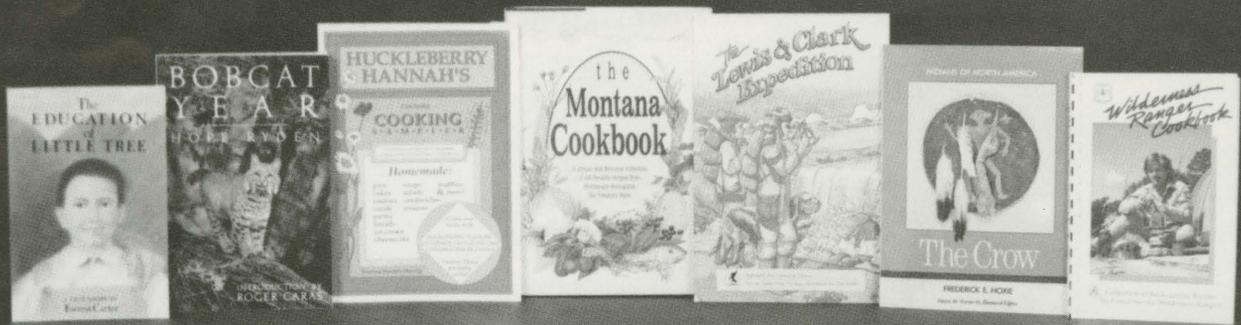

Hal Cannon, editor

The finest collection of cowboy poetry published since the pioneering work of John Lomax over fifty years ago. Tough and lean and honest, these poems enter our culture as literature.
201 pages (5057) Paperback $9.95

COWBOY POETRY A CONTEMPORARY GATHERING

Hal Cannon, editor

A first-rate sampling of the best cowboy poetry being written today. The poets in this collection hail from all over the West. Sandwiched between the heartbreaks are humorous stories that'll put a little chuckle in your grin: it's the laughter that keeps these folks going when times are tough.
165 pages (5030) Paperback, $9.95

Books for Young People

BOBCAT YEAR

Hope Ryden

For nearly three years, naturalist Hope Ryden focused her studies on one of North America's most elusive and beautiful animals, the bobcat—and the result is Bobcat Year. This fascinating, endearing book tells the fictional story of a family of bobcats as they progress through the cycle of their year. Ages 8–14

200 pages (1560) Paperback, $14.95

THE EDUCATION OF LITTLE TREE

Forrest Carter

A Cherokee boyhood of the 1930s remembered in generous, loving detail. There's humor, tragedy, tenderness and, most of all, love. . . . A lot of people received a lot of education from their grandparents that schools don't offer. But few have expressed it as well as Little Tree has. Ages 8–14

216 pages (2069) Paperback, $10.95

INDIANS OF NORTH AMERICA

The Crow

Frederick Hoxie

The author presents to young adults, for the first time, the significant place that American Indians have had in our society. He also discusses the changing relationship between tribal groups and the federal government and describes each Indian culture in its own context and as it relates to the majority culture.

119 pages (2234) Paperback, $9.95

GOING WEST: COWBOYS AND PIONEERS

Martine Courtault

The book tells about the adventures of pioneers, what they brought with them in their wagons, and what they did when they arrived in the west. Ages 5–10

38 pages (2091) $4.95

THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXPEDITION

Illustrations by Dan White,
Text by Sanna Kiesling

Although most major events in American history have been covered in numerous books, many of these events do not appear in a brief, but factual, children's book. Full-color illustrations. Ages 8–12

32 pages (2236) Paperback, $4.95

THE FIRE MOUNTAINS

Illustrations by DD Dowden,
Text by Beverly Magley

With this easy-to-read, full-color book, young readers can learn about natural wonders such as ominous volcanoes. The story of nature is too exciting to be left to professional scientists. Full-color illustrations. Ages 8–12

32 pages (9094) Paperback, $4.95

M IS FOR MONTANA

Gayle Corbell Shirley
Illustrated by Constance Rummell
Bergum

This beautifully illustrated, innovative book introduces children to the alphabet as well as to some of the riches of Big Sky Country. Recommended for preschool and younger.

32 pages (2054) Paperback, $7.95

FOLLOWING INDIAN TRAILS

Nicolas Greinier

Tales of how the Indians got to America, how they lived, and how they played, what their buffalo hunts were like and many other accomplishments. Ages 5–10

38 pages (2090) $4.95

Cookbooks

THE MONTANA COOKBOOK

A unique and delicious collection of 500 favorite recipes from Montanans throughout the Treasure State. Montana cooking is as wide as the Big Sky itself, and now The Montana Cookbook brings together the best of Montana cooking for everyone to enjoy. These recipes—selected from more than a thousand submitted by Montanans from all parts of the state—reflect the state's rich diversity.

352 pages (3026) $19.95

HUCKLEBERRY HANNAH'S COUNTRY COOKING SAMPLER

Deanna Hansen-Doying

Inside this cover are over 200 of the most scrumdillyicious yummys and goodies for which your lips have ever had the pleasure! Every recipe is a "tried and true, please 'em everytime," Montana favorite, soon to be your favorite, too. Enjoy these recipes.

132 pages (3003) Paperback, $12.95

WILDERNESS RANGER COOKBOOK

Valerie Brunnell and Ralph Swain

A collection of backcountry recipes by U.S. Forest Service Wilderness Rangers. The Wilderness Ranger Cookbook is a compilation of several winning recipes from rangers across the country. Wilderness tips are sprinkled throughout the book to help you, the reader, do your part to preserve America's wildlands. Enjoy!

111 pages (3004) Paperback, $7.95

C. M. Russell Christmas Cards

Each package contains 12 notecards and 13 envelopes. Outside verse and inside greeting vary. Boxed cards, $7.50

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS ASSORTMENT

One of each of the 12 cards pictured on this page (8113)

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Inside greeting: Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (8104)

CHRISTMAS AT LINE CAMP

May Christmas bring Friends to your Fireside, Peace to your Pathway/And Good Health throughout the New Year. (8103)

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU AND YOURN

A gift cant be valued by measur nor pound/ Nor counting the coin it cost/A tune from a fiddle's a mighty sweet gift/But taint long left the bow till its lost/The ear lost the music but the heart held the sound/And correlled all the goodness it meant/Twas a gift from the heart with out measur nor pound/An it dont cost the giver a cent/Love is a giver of gifts, with friendship his husky mate/Its the slices of heart that you get with a gift/That gives any gift its weight. (8111)

BEST WISHES

Inside greeting: Hoping your Holidays are filled with Cheer (8101)

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU AND YOURS

Inside greeting: Happy Holidays and Best Wishes for the Coming Year (8110)

CHRISTMAS RANCH PARTY

May Christmas bring friends to your fireside, Peace to your Pathway/And Good Health throughout the New Year. (8105)

MAY YOUR DAYS BE BETTER

Inside greeting: Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (8109)

SANTA HELD UP

Inside greeting: Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (8112)

HERE'S HOPIN'

Inside greeting: Good friends, good times, good health, good cheer and happy days throughout the year. (8107)

CHRISTMAS MEAT

In every home, in every heart/The lights of friendship glow/And once again it's time to greet/The friends it's nice to know. Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (8102)

SEEIN' SANTA

Here's a toast to Santa Claus/The grand old man of cheer/He sails thru the moonlit heavens/To bring us joy each year! Merry Christmas and Happy New Year (8108)

THE GRASS IS SHORT

The grass is short, the range is dry, Good prospects ain't a half inch high The cows ain't fat, this verse ain't clever, But Merry Christmas same as ever! (8106)

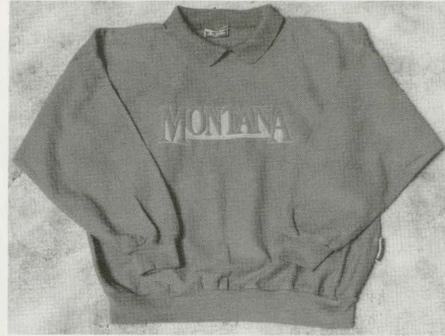

A C. M. Russell Full-Color Print Catalog is available from the Museum Store. 65 well-known Russell lithographs, acrylic finish, canvas prints and framed canvas prints can be ordered.

Montana Historical Society Canvas Book Bag colors: red/black,

blue/black, black/red,
black/green (9195)
$13.50

MONTANA Fleece Top

embroidered 100%
cotton. colors: Aqua,
Sunrise Peach, Ocean
Jade, and Coral Reef.
Adult sizes (generous):
s,m,l,xl (8509) $29.95

PHONE ORDERS

Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-5p.m. (Mtn. Time Zone)
406/442-2890

MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

225 N. Roberts Street
Helena, MT 59620

Send Free Print Catalog

ORDERED BY:

If name or address differs from label below, please correct information:

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Phone _____

SHIP TO:

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

For gift orders, please state how you want the card signed:

ITEM NUMBER	QTY.	DESCRIPTION	PRICE EACH	TOTAL PRICE
Quantity Total			TOTAL
SHIPPING —When special postage is not indicated, add $1.50 for the first item, $.50 for each additional item, not to exceed $5.00 per order to one address. If requesting U.P.S., provide street address. Please compute separate shipping charges for each address.			SHIPPING
			C.O.D. w/U.P.S. add $2.75
METHOD OF PAYMENT <input type="checkbox"/> Check or Money Order Enclosed <input type="checkbox"/> VISA <input type="checkbox"/> MasterCard # _____ Exp. _____			TOTAL

INVENTORY
REDUCTION
SALE

Back Issue Offer

$35 for 15 magazines (Use #9462 to order entire set)
$3 each (use order numbers in parentheses below)

Summer 1981 (9423T)
"Granville Stuart of the DHS Ranch, 1879-1887," William S. Reese, "Scenes in the Indian Country": Alexander Gardner's Stereographic Views of the 1868 Fort Laramie Treaty Councils," Raymond J. DeMallie

Autumn 1981 (9424T)
"Solving Custer Photo Puzzles," Neil Mangum, "Reservation Self-Sufficiency: Stock Raising Versus Farming on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, 1900-1914," Orlan J. Svingen

Autumn 1982 (9428T)
"After the Gold Rush: Chinese Mining in the Far West, 1850-1890," Randall E. Rohe, "A Surgeon at the Little Big Horn: Letters of Dr. Holmes O. Buecker," ed. Thomas R. Buecker

Spring 1984 (9434T)
"The Struggle for the Piegan Trade: The Saskatchewan Versus the Missouri," David Smyth, "Ernest Thompson Seton in Yellowstone Country," H. Allen Anderson

Autumn 1984 (9436T)
"Letters from the Lone Cowboy: A Sampling of Will James's Letters to Maxwell Perkins," William Gardner Bell, "We Are Going to Have a Big Sioux War": Colonel David S. Stanley's Yellowstone Expedition, 1872," Francis B. Robertson

Autumn 1985 (9440T)
Special Issue on The Yellowstone River

Winter 1986 (9441T)
"Montana Women's Clubs at the Turn of the Century," Stephanie Ambrose Tubbs, "New to the Country," William Kittredge

Spring 1986 (9442T)
"Handball's Sagebrush Champs: The Growth of Handball in Montana," Marcia Melton, "The Livery Stable in the American West," Clark C. Spence

Summer 1986 (9443T)
"Robert Meldrum and the Crow Peltry Trade," Keith Algier, "The Story of Mrs. Picotte-Galpin, a Sioux Heroine," John S. Gray

Autumn 1986 (9444T)
"Promise in the West: The Letters of Isaac Schultz, 1884-1887," ed. H. Duane Hampton, "Rise and Fall of Socialism in a Company Town: Anaconda, Montana, 1902-1905," Jerry Calvert

Winter 1987 (9445T)
"The Shared Memory of Montana's Pioneers," Clyde A. Milner II, "W. A. Clark and the Las Vegas Connection: The 'Midas of the West' and the Development of Southern Nevada," James W. Hulse

Spring 1987 (9446T)
"Testimony," David Long, "The Perils of Working in the Butte Underground: Industrial Fatalities in the Copper Mines, 1880-1920," Brian Shovers

Spring 1988 (9450T)
"There is Something Wrong Down Here": Smith Mine Disaster, Bearcreek, Montana, 1943," Paul Anderson, "Rivals for California: The Great Northern and the Southern Pacific, 1905-1931," Don L. Hofsommer

Winter 1989 (9453T)
"U. S. Army Surgeons and the Big Horn-Yellowstone Expedition of 1876," Mary C. Gillett, Centennial Biographies on Mary Ronan, Simon Pepin, and Dan Whetstone

Summer 1989 (9455T)
"Missing in Glacier: The Disappearance of the Whitehead Brothers in 1924," Jerome S. DeSanto, "Tracking C. M. Russell in Canada, 1888-1889," Hugh A. Dempsey

Special Centennial Issues Offer

Four special issues of Montana The Magazine of Western History explore important topics in the history of the six western states that celebrated their hundredth anniversaries in 1989 and 1990. A remarkable addition to the nation, the admission of Washington, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming was exceptional because of their location on the northern tier and their shared heritage.

Set of 4 (9461) $12.00
Deluxe file box to store your set (9599) $6.00

Fall 1987: Politics (9448) $5.00
Fall 1988: Economics (9452) $5.00
Fall 1989: Society & Culture (9456) . . . $5.00
Fall 1990: Art & Architecture (9460) . . . $5.00

COLLECTOR SET

ORDER
ALL 4 AND SAVE 40%

"T" Shirts & Polo Shirts

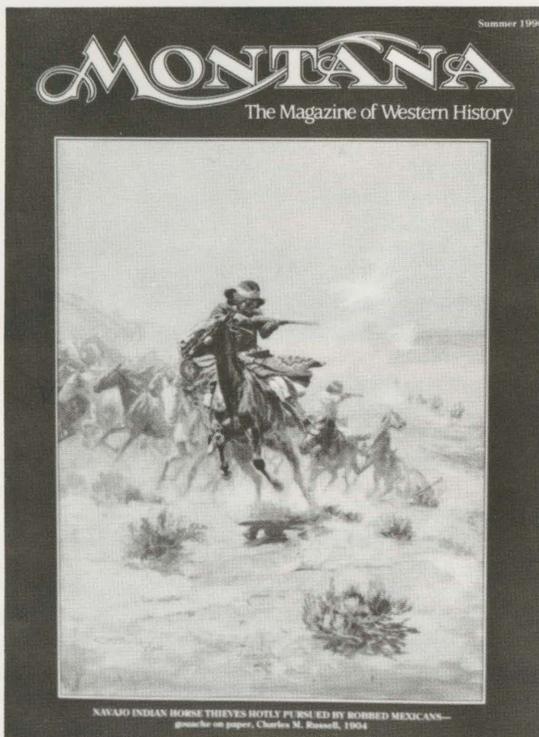

Montana The Magazine of Western History shirts available in 100% combed cotton.

Available in adult sizes: small, medium, large, x-large

(8573) Polo shirt (white, powder blue, burgandy) $28.95

(8572) T-Shirt (white, blue, mint, watermelon, black, jade, teal) $11.95

LOOK FORWARD TO THE PAST WITH

MONTANA

The Magazine of Western History

Subscribe to the most widely-read magazine in the nation devoted to the best in western history.

Since 1951 history lovers have welcomed Montana The Magazine of Western History into their homes. Through its well-documented articles, you explore the West's rich past and gain fresh insights into well-known events. In the period photographs, engravings, and historic art that illustrate each article, you meet the people who created our heritage. As part of your subscription, you become a member of the Montana Historical Society (MHS) and receive its quarterly newsletter, the Montana Post.

Subscriptions and memberships make great gifts, too. If you would like to give a gift of Montana, please send the recipient's name, address, how you would like the gift card signed along with your payment.

Yes, I wish to subscribe to Montana The Magazine of Western History (includes regular membership in MHS).

- 1 year (4 issues) $18 ($20 after Jan. 1, 1991)
 2 years (8 issues) $34 ($36 after Jan. 1, 1991)

Please add $5 per year for foreign orders.

- payment enclosed
Make checks payable to Montana Historical Society bill me
 Visa or Mastercard
card no. _____ exp. _____

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Is this a new subscription or renewal?

Mail to:
Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St.
Helena, Montana 59620
(406) 444-2890

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St.
Helena, Montana 59620

NON-PROFIT ORG.
U.S. POSTAGE PAID
Permit No. 461
Bozeman, MT 59715

SHORELINE COMM COLLEGE LIBRARY
16101 GREENWOOD AVE
SEATTLE WA 98133

Montana makes a great Christmas gift.

Books

DONN FRY
Times book editor

Time is a commodity in Ivan Doig's Montana, almost as tangible as a flock of sheep or a fresh-cut crop of hay.

Through his novels "English Creek" and "Dancing at the Rascal Fair," and now "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" (Atheneum, $18.95), the final volume in his trilogy about the state's Two Medicine country, time loops gracefully, almost casually. Yet it also has the steady, inexorable flow of history, as Doig peels away layer after layer of the lives that pass through Montana from the late 19th century through the state's centennial celebrations last year.

Memory is the force that energizes this commodity, time: "Memories are stories our lives tell us," Jick McCaskill declares near the end of the new novel, after he has taken a long look at his own 65 years. His final speech in the wintry dawn of Montana's 100th birthday, at a stirring flag-raising ceremony with family and friends in the town of Gros Ventre, provides a moving and eloquent coda to a remarkable trio of novels.

Like "English Creek," "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" is filtered through Jick's cantankerous personality. But while his memories in the earlier novel were corralled into the wide-eyed, golly-gee world view of a naive 14-year-old, "Ride With Me" gives full rein to an adult sensibility that manages to be both curmudgeonly and humane, that is guided by the wisdom and self-deprecating humor that come only with age.

Doig has seen to it that memory and history ride together, 1989-style, in this new novel. It takes the form of a picaresque ramble around Montana after Jick reluctantly agrees to use his Winnebago RV to ferry his older daughter and her former husband — Mariah is a photographer and Riley a columnist for the same Missoula newspaper

Harper & Row

MONTANA AND MEMORY

Finale of Doig's trilogy takes us back to Two Medicine country

Ivan Doig has seen to it that memory and history ride together.

he is emotionally. His sheep ranch along Noon Creek, under the shadow of the

on that land."

The independent Mariah, who always "seemed to be the only author of herself," wheedles Jick into joining their four-month journey, and although he professes to loath his former son-in-law, the trio is soon plying the interstates and back roads in search of stories and photos that burrow beneath the skin of centennial hoopla. Complementary as journalists in a way they never were as spouses, Mariah and Riley are soon producing compelling features, angering Montana chauvinists and, to Jick's consternation, warming up to each other again.

This is no mere Montana travelogue, and unlike "English Creek," whose lively prose was saddled with a glacial narrative pace, "Ride With Me" accelerates to a comfortable rhythm and seems to move along on cruise control. With Jick at the wheel, the "Bago" transports them from a buffalo preserve to the mine-cratered devastation of Butte, from the ghost of Shelby's boxing-match fame to the ghosts of Jick's own ancestors — the "Dancing at the Rascal Fair" generation — at the historical society in Helena.

They steer through Montana's romanticized past and the rocky economics of its present, always guided by Jick's crusty humor and Doig's deft touch with the landscape: "We might as well have been a carload of Swiss trying to sightsee Mongolia," says Jick, when they reach southeastern Montana, a bleak nowhere-land new to them all. "Grassland with sage low and thin on it ran to all the horizons... a surprising number of attempts had been made to scratch some farming into this barebone plain, but what grew here mostly was distance."

But this is a journey through memory as much as landscape, and Doig pulls off a daring but gloriously successful gamble. Midway through, the trio grows to four with the addition of a woman from Jick's past who is as unexpected as she is welcome. She puts time in perspective for him, however, allowing Jick to finally admit that "a person tends to think that the past has happened only to himself."

Much earlier on, Mariah explains her photographic ambitions as the hope that in

FICTION

Montana frontiers fall in novels of past and present

St Paul's Pioneer Press 11/18/90

MARY ANN GROSSMANN STAFF WRITER

Contemporary Montana, rich in scenery but troubled by economic woes and racism, is the setting for highly praised new novels by award-winning authors who visited the Twin Cities recently.

In "The Indian Lawyer," American Indian author James Welch explores the ways a reservation-born lawyer responds to living as a success in the white world and the loyalty that draws him back to the tribe.

Ivan Doig gives his readers a state that is losing its heritage through urbanization in his novel, "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana."

"I miss the wonderful landscape of Montana, the arc of the big sky. But I don't miss the economic climate," says 51-year-old Doig, who lives in Seattle. "The entire Rockies are the poorest region in the United States today."

In "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana," the last of a trilogy, 65-year-old Jick McCaskill reluctantly agrees to drive his daughter Mariah (a photographer) and her former husband (a columnist) around Montana in a recreational vehicle as the journalists cover the state's centennial for a newspaper. From the "radical" college town of Missoula to the capital of Helena, across the Chief Joseph battlefield and over to Ekalaka on the eastern border, the unlikely threesome explores the state, meeting an assortment of humans and one mighty mean buffalo. Underlying the often-funny story is Jick's realization that his family ranch probably will be sold to non-ranchers.

"Jick sees a Montana that is losing a lot of its old underpinnings on the land. He says we have to figure out how to turn loss into change," says Doig, a native Montanan who started working on ranches as a teen-ager.

"Some of this loss is due to severe weather and some to changes in the economy. Jick sees the kind of standardization and 'chain malling' that has been coursing through America. Certainly, a lot of the old way of life is going, especially life on the really small spreads on which a couple or a small family ran about 100 head of cattle. Those are boutique ranches now and they have to have inherited money behind them."

■ "RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA"

■ By Ivan Doig

■ Atheneum

■ $18.95

■ "THE INDIAN LAWYER"

■ By James Welch

■ Norton

■ $19.95

In "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana," Ivan Doig examines the fading life and values of old Montana and engages in a little myth bashing along the way.

Yet Doig, who is praised for the beauty of his language, says he tried "not to have moonie nostalgia creep in" because not everything is worse than it used to be.

One myth he does lay to rest, via a hilarious mock cattle drive, is the widespread myth of Montana as historically populated by "Lonesome Dove"-style cowboys driving cattle north.

"I've always tried to write as though (Western history) is a great deal more complicated than slapping a hat on your head and strapping on a gun," he says. "More cattle came to Montana in boxcars on Jim Hill's railroad than from Texas."

Now that his trilogy is complete, Doig wants to write about his parents' move from Arizona back to Montana after World War II.

"I found a little cache of letters my mother wrote to my uncle during the last six months of World War II," he says. "My mother was German, born in Wisconsin, but her family moved to Montana when she was a baby. Why did she and my father leave Arizona, where they didn't have diddy, and return to Montana where they had even less? Part of the book will be trying to figure out what was the pull back to Montana."

James Welch, who's Blackfeet and Gros Ventre, has different memories of growing up in Montana. Going to the movies in Browning, for instance, with other American Indian kids.

"We'd cheer the cavalry when it came around the mesa. At that time, even Indian people felt almost compelled to root against themselves," he recalls.

In "The Indian Lawyer," the 49-year-old Welch gives his readers a protagonist named Sylvester Yellow Calf, who has left the Blackfeet reservation to become an all-star basketball player and outstanding law school graduate. He's assimilated into white American life until, as a member of the state parole board, he denies release to a criminal. When Yellow Calf is the focus of a blackmail scheme planned from jail, and becomes emotionally entangled with the prisoner's wife, he finds he must confront his native legacy.

Welch, who lives in Missoula, served on the Montana parole board for 10 years and learned hard lessons about why American Indians, who make up about 12 percent of the state's population, are 22 percent of the prison population.

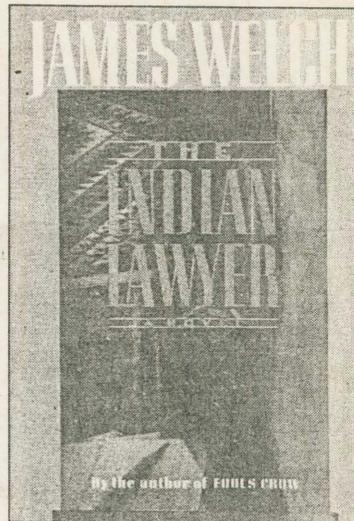

"Indians often can't afford counsel, and they're easier to railroad into cutting a plea bargain that will put them in prison," he says.

Like Yellow Calf and many other American Indians his age, Welch is the first generation in his family to go to college. He graduated from the University of Montana, where his teacher and mentor was poet Richard Hugo, and he's written three previous novels, including "Fools Crow," which won the Los Angeles Times Book Prize for fiction and an American Book award.

"That book got national attention because it was the first purely historical novel written by an Indian person," Welch says. "Its success was due to the fact that it told the story from the point of view of the Indian people and makes white people the invaders."

Although Welch is pleased that the dominant culture is finding values in the traditional American Indian belief system, he agrees with other American Indian authors such as Gerald Vizenor and Thomas King that American Indians are periodically re-romanticized.

"In the early '70s, there was a great deal of interest in Indian culture, but in the early to mid-'80s that fell away. I think people got tired of hearing about Indians and their problems," he says.

In "The Indian Lawyer," James Welch explores the balancing act between living as a success in the white world and the demands of loyalty to one's tribe.

"People are coming back to an appreciation of the native belief system. But most people don't think of the reality of the Indian experience, except in broad terms of alcohol and drugs as being a problem. That's why it's important we have Indians writing drama, literature and poetry. By doing that, you open the way to younger writers who can learn to adopt this European way of writing to tell the story of Indian people as truly as they possible can, to show we can break out of stereotypes. All Indians are individuals, not these exotic creatures on reservations that government takes care of as though they were on a game preserve. We're more interested all the time in controlling our destiny."

Big-Sky Country Ride

By Jon Remmerde

JOHAN ANGUS McCASKILL (Jick), his daughter, Mariah (Mariah Montana) and her ex-husband, Riley Wright, explore Montana in Jick's Winnebago, looking for stories to illustrate Montana's centennial, 1989, for The Missoula Montanian newspaper. Riley writes the stories. Camera-toting Mariah shoots them. Jick is chauffeur, chaperone, and narrator of the book, the third in a trilogy.

Jick is a Montana rancher trying to integrate his wife's recent death into the rest of his life. He is almost 65, and his past presents itself to him again and again, and he fights it. He hasn't come to terms with the people and events that led to his brother's death in World War II. Jick was wounded and immediately out of the war, and he hasn't understood how that experience fits into the totality of his life.

It is time to understand any pattern that knits together his life, because it's time to make decisions. Should he sell the ranch to the modern, full-speed-ahead enterprise that accumulates ranches and exploits their financial capability to bare, blowing-in-the-wind soil? He hates what they're doing, but they are offering him a lot of money. He doesn't want to run the ranch anymore, and neither does any family member to whom he might give it.

We see parts of Montana in images so well crafted that we might be looking at Mariah's photos, the countryside, the people, towns, mines, places, the very air of it, with some 1989 smog in the big sky.

Montana's assessment — how were the state's first 100 years, where is there to go in the next 100 years? — backdrops Jick's story the way the Montana scenery backdrops the highways they travel and the places they stop.

We travel with the Winnebagos to the edge of the Bearpaw Mountains, along Snake Creek, where, in 1877, the United States Army ended the attempt of the Nez Perce Indians to escape into Canada. In this story about the Chief Joseph battleground, Riley describes a rifle pit dug by one of the Nez Perce as "a pock in the earth." He goes on, "Combat pits nowadays are greatly deeper in the prairie south of the Bearpaws... Missile silos, we let the Department of Defense ... call these ... as if what they store is lifegiving. ... Enough gopher-holed megatonnage to incinerate people by the million..."

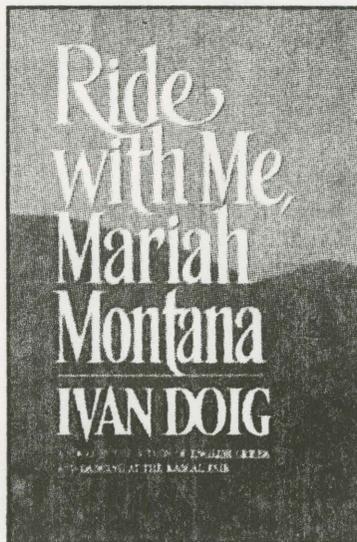

When Jick and the Baloney Express Riders talk to the young man in need at a highway rest area, Jick thinks, "I now was furious. When I was not much younger than him, other pickups were on the road, passing through the Two Medicine Country from the droughted-out farms of the High Line with the bitter farewell GOODBYE OLD DRY painted across the boxboards... Two rages balanced in me; that here 50 years later there was still no goodbye to that grief of being driven from the land..."

After one of two heart-stopping encounters between grizzly bears and humans, Riley writes, "... two tribes in what is no longer enough space for two." Jick wonders, "But I could not get over wondering how contagious the past is."

Ivan Doig doesn't push these themes too hard. They are just there, as they are in the modern

BOOKS

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA

By Ivan Doig
New York: Atheneum
324 pp., $18.95

world, background to a story of people who lead essentially joyfullives and come to acceptable terms with themselves, each other, their past, the environment.

This is a very readable book. The only problem is the same problem Tonsil Vapor encounters when he tries to interview Good Help Hebner for a centennial story for television. It's an interesting story the man has to tell, but his language is such that you can't put it on the airwaves.

Many Montanians do talk the way Doig quotes them, so it may be legitimate characterization, but I haven't been comfortable with saying yes when my daughters ask if they can read the book. I think I'll decide they know people talk like that; they've seen and heard the words; it's a good and pertinent enough story, so start it and see how it goes.

■ Jon Remmerde is a freelance writer who lives near Bailey, Colo.

Calendar begins year with Johnson book signing

Throwing out from the pre-holiday doldrums — and blizzard — Seattle's literary calendar warms up again next month with a wide range of events, including a book signing by local author Charles Johnson, who recently won the National Book Award for his novel, "Middle Passage." He will autograph copies on Saturday.

Two other big programs come courtesy of Seattle Arts & Lectures: Amy Tan, whose first novel was "The Joy Luck Club," will discuss her development as a writer on Jan. 9, and the great novelist and essayist V.S. Naipaul will discuss his new book about India on Jan. 29. Most tickets are gone for both events, but some may be available at the door.

Here's a selected list of January's book-and-author events:

- Jan. 2: Translator David Jenkins reads from his book of 12th-century Japanese poetry, "The Dance of the Dust on the Rafters," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books ($3.50).
- Jan. 2: Society of Children's Book Writers: Ted and Gloria Rand, 6:30 p.m., Demaray Hall, Seattle Pacific University (822-9710).
- Jan. 3: National Writers Club: attorney Peter Camp discuss legal-literary issues, 7:30, University Christian Church, 4731 15th Ave. N.E. ($3 for nonmembers; 783-3401).
- Jan. 5: Seattle writer Charles Johnson autographs his National Book Award-winning novel, "Middle Passage," 12:30 p.m., Brentano's, Westlake Center.
- Jan. 6, 13, 20, 27: Red Sky Poetry Theatre: Jan. 6, open mike; Jan. 13, storyteller Robert Gorden; Jan. 20, open mike; Jan. 27, Paul Hunter; all at 7 p.m., Ditto, 2303 Fifth Ave.
- Jan. 8: Eastside Writers: Steve Johannesen discusses freelancing, 7:30 p.m., Kirkland Congregational Church, 106 Fifth Ave., Kirkland (free; 746-9084).
- Jan. 8, 15, 17, 22, 28: Linda Carlson discusses her book, "How to Find a Good Job in Seattle" at Seattle and King County library branches: Jan. 8, 7:30 p.m., Fairwood/Renton; Jan. 15, 7:30 p.m., Kent; Jan. 17, noon, Downtown; Jan. 22, 7 p.m. University; Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m., Columbia (all free).

Naipaul

Books

Ivan Doig
"Ride With Me, Mariah Montana"

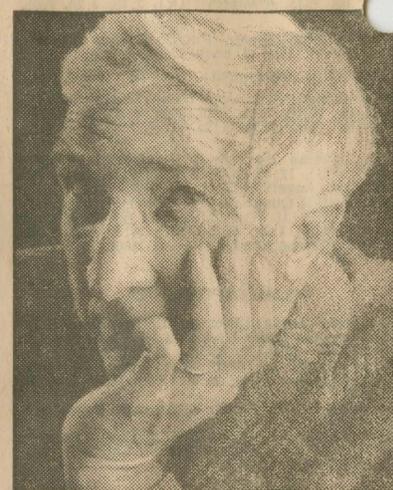

Charles Johnson
"Middle Passage"

Joyce Carol Oates
"Because It Is Bitter . . ."

Timothy Egan
"The Good Rain"

John Updike
"Rabbit at Rest"

Books that mark 1990

A LOOK BACK AT

SEATTLE AUTHORS RANK AMONG THE MEMORABLE

Seattle seemed to reign as the nation's most livable city throughout 1990, as survey after survey listed it at or near the top of choice places to live. If there is any truth to that — and I believe there is — then it is partly due to the fact that we are a city of dedicated readers and talented writers.

DONN FRY
Times book editor

The readership aspect is well-known: Our high ranking in terms of book sales, number of bookstores and library usage has been reported often and repeated endlessly, sometimes inaccurately. A few months ago in these pages, I made the case that Seattle ranks as the fifth best book city in the nation, based on statistics from the Department of Commerce.

But what shouldn't be overlooked is that 1990 amply demonstrated that Seattle also is home to a number of our nation's best authors.

"Age of Iron" by J.M. Coetzee is an exploration of apartheid as seen through the eyes of an elderly white woman.

ment policies by Pantheon's parent Random House, and many authors and readers interpreted the action — correctly, it seems

Many fine books from 1990 bear a second look. Instead of a traditional "best book" or "Top 10," we compiled a list of Malan's pop-culture references have a through-the-looking-glass quality, as he conjures Baby Boom nostalgia (Motown tunes, psychedelia) and places it in a startling political context.

■ Novels by South Africa's two finest writers put a compelling fictional spin on many of the issues touched on by Rian Malan in "My Traitor's Heart." "Age of Iron" (Random House) is J.M. Coetzee's exploration of a national cancer — apartheid — as seen through the eyes of an elderly white woman who herself is dying of cancer. "Language and its role in politics have long fascinated Coetzee," said Times reviewer Sandra Chait, "and in 'Age of Iron' language itself almost becomes a character; the words swirl with such sure rhythmic energy that the novel seems like a dance, a symphony, a poem." In "My Son's Story" (Farrar, Straus & Giroux), Nadine Gordimer sees the nation's contradictions through the eyes of a 13-year-old "colored" boy — a child of mixed race — whose political-activist father has an affair with a white woman who works for a human-rights organization. Said reviewer Michael Upchurch: "(Gordimer) creates divided personalities that live on the page, and in the process, she tellingly evokes a country 'where conflict breaks up all consistency of character.'"

■ "Rabbit at Rest" (Knopf) brings a close John Updike's four-novel series that began with "Rabbit, Run" in 1960 and which provides our best literary portrait of late 20th-century America. Harry "Rabbit" Angstrom, contemplating his own mortality in his Florida condo, is "an inexcusable jerk," wrote Richard Wakefield in his review in The Times, "yet these four novels link seamlessly, unforgettably."

■ "Van Gogh: His Life and His Art" (Crown), by David Sweetman, was a British art historian's fine biography of the great noon, Downtown; Jan. 22, 7 p.m., University; Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m., Columbia (all free).

- Jan. 9: Seattle mystery writer K.K. Beck reads from work in progress, 7 p.m., Seattle Mystery Bookshop, 117 Cherry St. (363-2541).
- Jan. 9: Seattle Arts & Lectures: Novelist Amy Tan, author of "The Joy Luck Club," speaks about "Finding a Voice," 7:30 p.m., First United Methodist Church, Fifth Ave. and Marion St. ($12.50, $15; 623-8655).
- Jan. 14: Seattle mountaineer/writer Greg Child reads and shows slides from his book, "Thin Air: Encounters in the Himalayas," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 15: Newspaper humorist Dave Barry, 8 p.m., Shoreline Community College gymnasium, 16101 Greenwood Ave. N. ($8; 546-4606).
- Jan. 15: Psychologist/author Robert Moore reads from "King, Warrior, Magician, Lover: Rediscovering the Archetypes of the Mature Masculine," 7:30, Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 16: Novelist Michael Cunningham reads from "At Home at the End of the World," 5 p.m., and social historian Christopher Lasch discusses his new book, "The True and Only Heaven: Progress and Its Critics," 7:30 p.m., both at Elliott Bay Books (both free).
- Jan. 17: Walter Kirn reads from his story collection, "My Hard Bargain," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 22: Novelist Barbara Quick reads from "Northern Edge," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 23: Seattle's Martha Avery discusses her translation of "Getting Used to Dying," by Chinese novelist Zhang Xianliang, 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 24: Bellingham writer Laura Kalpakian reads from "The Dark Continent and Other Stories," 7:30, Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 25: Photographer Adam Kufeld shows slides and discusses his book, "El Salvador," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books ($5).
- Jan. 25: Poets Paula Jones-Gardiner and Gloria Yamato read, 7:30, North Seattle Community College dining room ($3; pre-registration, 527-3705).
- Jan. 26: Poets Gary Curtis, Ken Smith and David Shaddock read, 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books ($4).
- Jan. 28: J. California Cooper reads from her first novel, "Family," 7:30 p.m., Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 29: Seattle Arts & Lectures: Novelist/essayist V.S. Naipaul discusses his new book, "India: A Million Mutinies Now," 7:30 p.m., First United Methodist Church, 811 Fifth Ave. ($10; 623-8655).
- Jan. 30: Port Townsend poet and fiction writer Bill Ransom reads from his novel, "Jaguar," 7:30, Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 31: Natalie Kusz reads from her Alaska memoir, "Road Song," 7:30, Elliott Bay Books (free).
- Jan. 31: W.R. "Bill" Wilkins reads from "The Gandy Dancer's Son," 7:30 p.m., Open Books, 1716 N. 45th St. (free).

1990 amply demonstrated that Seattle also is home to a number of our nation's best authors.

That thought sank in forcefully when I was considering how to sum up the past year in books. I realized that three of the best books I read were written by Seattle authors — and they were good by any critical yardstick, not just the standard of hometown chauvinism.

Consider this trio: "Middle Passage," by Charles Johnson; "The Good Rain," by Timothy Egan; and "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana," by Ivan Doig.

Just last month, Johnson's novel won the National Book Award, a prize that ranks with the Pulitzer as the nation's top literary award — and "Middle Passage" surely will be a contender for the Pulitzer, too, when it is announced in the spring.

Egan's lyrical work of nonfiction, subtitled "Across Time and Terrain in the Pacific Northwest," is just about the best portrait I can imagine of our corner of the country, while Doig's novel was a big-hearted finale to a trilogy that beautifully captured a century of life in Montana.

But 1990 also saw a number of other milestones: At the beginning of the year, "Vineland" marked the reappearance of Thomas Pynchon's byline on a novel after 17 years, since the monumental "Gravity's Rainbow" was published; "Vineland" disappointed most critics. And much later in the year, John Updike's "Rabbit at Rest" brought to a close one of the longest-running lives in American literature.

There was no story this year that rivaled the controversy sparked last year when the Ayatollah Khomeini leveled a death sentence on writer Salman Rushdie for allegedly defaming Islam in his novel, "The Satanic Verses." That tragedy continued to fester in 1990: although the Ayatollah died shortly after issuing the decree, his minions have said the sentence remains in effect, and Rushdie still has 'round-the-clock protection in England.

But he is trying to reconstruct his life. Rushdie was interviewed recently on "60 Minutes" and later showed up unannounced at three London bookstores to autograph copies of his new novel, "Harcourt and the Sea of Stories." With Muslim officials, Rushdie reportedly has begun a dialogue aimed at resolving the dispute, and just last week he announced he would not authorize a paperback edition of "The Satanic Verses" — adding that his views don't coincide with those of his characters.

There were two controversies this year that raised hackles largely within the New York-based publishing industry, but both issues have significance for the reading public as well.

In February, the forced resignation of André Schiffrin after 28 years as managing director of venerable Pantheon Books triggered mass resignations and protests in the streets by editors and writers. Since its founding in 1942, Pantheon had built an enviable reputation publishing works of history, social criticism and international literature with authors such as Jean-Paul Sartre, Willy Brandt, Albert Camus and Anita Brookner.

Schiffrin fell victim to new cost-containment policies by Pantheon's parent Random House, and many authors and readers interpreted the action — correctly, it seems — as emblematic of the ascendancy of accountants over book people within the major publishing houses.

The other issue arose late in the year, and promises to become even more divisive in 1991. That is the on-again, off-again, on-again publication of Bret Easton Ellis' novel, "American Psycho." Ellis, you may recall, is the young writer who achieved notoriety, if not literary respect, a few years ago with "Less Than Zero," a slight novel about disaffected, coke-snorting rich kids that was published while Ellis was still in college.

By all reports, he hasn't improved with age. His new novel, "American Psycho," recounts in vomituous detail the deaths and dismemberments of various women at the hands of a conspicuously consuming yuppie. Originally scheduled for publication by Simon & Schuster, it was dropped mere days before printing after the firm's chairman and his boss, the chairman of parent firm Paramount Communications, learned of the book through excerpts in Spy and Time magazines.

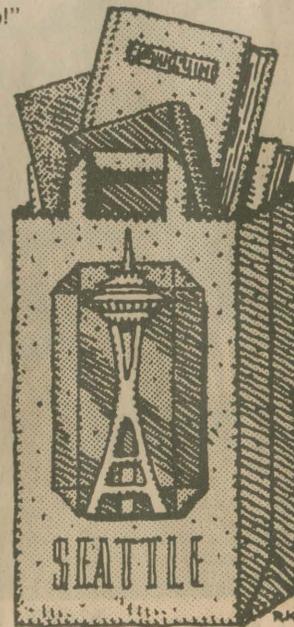

Never one to back away from controversy (or, it appears, marketing potential), Vintage Books jumped into the breach, bought Simon & Schuster's discard, and plans to release it as a paperback original. It is being "edited" now, whether rewritten or gutted is unclear.

The controversy is interesting because the various partisans frequently speak with one voice on artistic matters: Many feminists are outraged at what they see as Ellis' grisly misogyny and the publishing industry's willingness to indulge it, while the Authors Guild and others are charging Simon & Schuster with censorship for dumping the book in the first place.

BESTSELLERS OF 1990

Hardback nonfiction

1. "Oh, The Places You'll Go!" Dr. Seuss
2. "The Good Rain," Timothy Egan
3. "Homecoming," John Bradshaw
4. "Iron John," Robert Bly
5. "Dave Barry Turns 40," Dave Barry
6. "Perfect Health," Deepak Chopra
7. "You Just Don't Understand," Deborah Tannen
8. "The Civil War," Geoffrey C. Ward with Ric Burns and Ken Burns
9. "The Frugal Gourmet On Our Immigrant Heritage," Jeff Smith
10. "Men At Work," George F. Will
11. "Wealth Without Risk," Charles J. Givens
12. "By Way of Deception," Victor Ostrovsky
13. "Megatrends 2000," John Naisbitt and Patricia Aburdene
14. "Get to the Heart," Barbara Mandrell
15. "The Way Things Work," David Macaulay

These were the top-selling hardback books, fiction and nonfiction, in the Pacific Northwest during 1990, as reported by Pacific Pipeline Inc., a regional book distributor based in Kent.

Hardback fiction

1. "The Plains of Passage," Jean M. Auel
2. "Skinny Legs And All," Tom Robbins
3. "Crow and Weasel," Barry Lopez
4. "Ride With Me, Mariah Montana," Ivan Doig
5. "The Burden of Proof," Scott Turow
6. "The Stand," Stephen King
7. "Four Past Midnight," Stephen King
8. "Coyote Waits," Tony Hillerman
9. "The Witching Hour," Anne Rice
10. "September," Rosamunde Pilcher
11. "Jurassic Park," Michael Crichton
12. "Message From Nam," Danielle Steel
13. "Longshot," Dick Francis
14. "The Ruby Knight," David Eddings
15. "Memories of Midnight," Sydney Sheldon

Many fine books from 1990 bear a second look. Instead of a traditional "best books" or "Top 10," I've compiled a list of 15 memorable books from the past year — books which either I or reviewers for The Seattle Times found to possess uncommon merit.

"Middle Passage" (Atheneum) won the National Book Award for fiction for Seattle writer Charles Johnson, who is a longtime professor of creative writing at the University of Washington. Johnson's brief but idea-packed novel follows freed slave Rutherford Calhoun, who stows away aboard a slave clipper bound for Africa, to pick up a cargo of "black gold."

"The Good Rain" (Knopf), by Seattle journalist Timothy Egan, inspects our area with a lens provided by the 1853 journal of intrepid traveler Theodore Winthrop. Egan, who is Northwest correspondent for The New York Times, has a smooth and seductive prose style, and he does a marvelous job of playing off our vibrant, unspoiled past against the troubling environmental issues that haunt our region today.

"Ride With Me, Mariah Montana" (Atheneum), by Ivan Doig, brings to a close the trilogy that began with "English Creek" and continued with "Dancing at the Rascal Fair." Through the wonderful voice of cantankerous Jick McCaskill — introduced as a youth in "English Creek," but now widowed in his 60s — Doig gives us a rollicking, Winnebago's-eye view of some memorable characters in contemporary Montana as the state faces new challenges in its second hundred years.

"My Traitor's Heart" (Atlantic Monthly Press), by Rian Malan, is an impressive memoir by a young South African journalist who has a sharp eye for the incongruities of growing up white and liberal in a society riven by apartheid.

link seamlessly, unforgettable."

"Van Gogh: His Life and His Art" (Crown), by David Sweetman, was a British art historian's fine biography of the great Dutch painter, published on the 100th anniversary of the troubled artist's suicide. Sweetman, said Times reviewer Joseph F. Keppler, "clarifies van Gogh's life and times with expert devotion and lets the paintings speak for themselves."

"London Fields" (Harmony), by Martin Amis, is a phantasmagoric mystery that involves a sexy psychic, a low-life thief and a hapless yuppie. Times reviewer Adam Woog found it "sprawling, brilliant and rambunctious"; he said Amis "throws off more provocative ideas and images in a single paragraph than most writers get into complete novels."

"Because It Is Bitter, and Because It Is My Heart" (Dutton) is one of Joyce Carol Oates' finest novels, "as fearless a fictional treatment of American racism as any from a well-known white author in recent years," said Times reviewer Michael Upchurch. The novel, which was a National Book Award contender against Johnson's "Middle Passage," probes the strange bond linking a pair of teen-agers — a black boy and a white girl — brought together by an act of murder.

"Men at Work: The Craft of Baseball" (Macmillan) is journalist George F. Will's love song to the sport that is his passion as much as politics. Will, said Times reviewer Jim Byrne, "provides a lucid explanation of the nuances of the game, neither too technical for the novice fan nor too mundane for the folks who fancy themselves as experts."

"The Things They Carried" (Houghton Mifflin/Seymour Lawrence), by Tim O'Brien, is yet another look at the Vietnam War by the writer who won the National Book Award for "Going After Cacciato." Times reviewer Terry McDermott said the book, which follows a platoon through a year of battle, is like the war itself — "in turns brilliant, moving, odd, episodic and, at times, apparently pointless."

"Friend of My Youth" (Knopf), by Alice Munro, was the best book of short stories last year, a collection of 10 intricate tales involving the familiar themes of marriage, adultery and remarriage but cast with remarkable new insight. "Not pessimism but a mature realism informs such a vision," said Joyce Carol Oates in a review in The Times, "and it is one that Munro continues to fashion into art of a conscientious order."

"The General in His Labyrinth" (Knopf), the latest novel by Nobel laureate Gabriel Garcia Márquez, is a compelling meditation on myth and history based on the final weeks in the life of South American hero Simón Bolívar. "García Márquez seems to be telling us," said Times reviewer Anthony L. Geist, "that history is never fully objective, while what seems purely personal also has historical and political dimensions."

"Darkness Visible: A Memoir of Madness" (Random House) was noted author William Styron's brief but haunting exploration of his own descent into suicidal depression — and his eventual recovery. In an exclusive interview with the Pulitzer Prize-winning author, Times reviewer Mitsu Akiyama Sundvall said, "Styron leads us in a descent into his own personal purgatory; he challenges us to imagine the unimaginable, to express the inexpressible, and he does so with remarkable eloquence."

Ride
with Me,
Mariah
Montana

IVAN DOIG

A NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF ENGLISH CREEK
AND DANCING AT THE RASCAL FAIR

Ivan Doig

*RIDE WITH ME,
MARIAH MONTANA*

ON THE ROAD WITH IVAN DOIG

When Ivan Doig set out to put a century of the American West into his Montana trilogy which RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA (Atheneum/September 28, 1990/ $18.95) now completes, the past was almost too cooperative. As he crisscrossed the state in ten years of research and writing, the cycle of drought and hard times that he was exploring in the homesteaders' era of Dancing at the Rascal Fair and the Depression years of English Creek struck Montana again. "People I talked to there in the 1980's echoed what their parents said about the hardships of the 1930's and their grandparents said after the terrible winter of 1919," Doig reflects. "The past has its own voice."

The rigors and splendors of travel competed during the writing of RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA as Doig traced out his characters' reportorial "circumnavigation" of Montana's landscape and history during the state's centennial year. At the National Bison Range at Moiese, a buffalo herd grazed past his car so close the swish of their tails could be heard. At the Chief Joseph Battlefield, while changing to a heavier coat as night and cold descended, Doig locked himself out of his rental car "fifteen miles from anywhere -- a bonehead maneuver I immediately foisted off onto one of my characters." Montana was being scorched by record heat in the summer of 1988 as Doig and his photographer wife, Carol, drove a newly rented motorhome out onto the prairie expanses. When the temperature hit 105, the motorhome conked out on a remote road. "Miraculously, with maybe a few cusswords thrown in," as Doig puts it, the vehicle was coaxed back to life, only to suffer system failures of one kind or another in each day's extreme heat until the ultimate meltdown, the air conditioner. The Doigs' final recourse: a bedtime visit to a swimming pool and then sleeping in wet bathing suits. "Clamminess never felt better," says Doig.

The grandson of Montana homesteaders and the son of Montana ranch workers, Ivan Doig lets his book have the last word on his belovedly difficult home country: "You look at the unbeatable way the land latches into the sky atop the Rocky Mountain Front or on the curve of the planet across the plains, and you end up calculating that our first hundred years here could have been spent worse."

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA
a novel by Ivan Doig
Publication Date: September 28, 1990
Price: $18.95
ISBN: 0-689-12019-2

May 1990

It confirms his reputation, as Winifred Blevins said in the Los Angeles Times, "as our foremost recorder and interpreter of life in the...American West." The novel is receiving advance praise:

"A paean to Montana and frontiersmanship--but also a casually artful, and triumphant, end to Doig's trilogy."

--Kirkus Reviews

"In this crowning volume of a trilogy, which includes English Creek and Dancing at the Rascal Fair, Doig again displays a masterly skill in depicting the American West which few writers match....This entertaining ramble adroitly blends travelogue, family drama, history and newspaper lore."

--Publishers Weekly

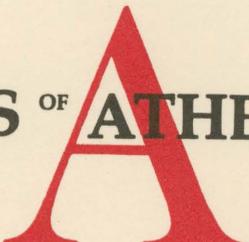

In 1984 English Creek, the first book in the trilogy, was published to wide acclaim. "Ivan Doig has a rare, uncanny skill for bringing history to life," wrote Carol Van Strum in USA Today, "He achieves a flawless weld of fact and fiction." It won the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award, the Governor's Writers Day Award and the Western Heritage Award for Best Novel from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame. Dancing at the Rascal Fair (1987) was also honored with the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award for Literary Excellence. Doig's first book, This House of Sky, published in 1978, was nominated for the National Book Award in contemporary thought and received a Christopher Award, the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award and the Governor's Writers Day Award. "The language begins in western territory and experience but in the hands of an artist it touches all landscape and all life," Robert Kirsch wrote in the Los Angeles Times. "Doig is such an artist."

Doig is also author of Winter Brothers (1980), which won the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award and the Governor's Writers Day Award, and was adapted for a public television documentary. His first novel The Sea Runners (1982) was hailed as one of the notable books of the year by The New York Times Book Review.

Ivan Doig lives in Seattle with his wife, Carol.

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA
a novel by Ivan Doig
Publication Date: September 28, 1990
Price: $18.95
ISBN: 0-689-12019-2

May 1990

NEWS OF  ATHENEUM PUBLISHERS

SUSAN RICHMAN, Vice President, Director of Publicity
Macmillan Publishing Company
866 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 212 / 702-2120

SUSAN RICHMAN, Vice President, Director of Publicity
Macmillan Publishing Company
866 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 212 / 702-2120

Ivan Doig
RIDE WITH ME,
MARIAH MONTANA

EXTRAORDINARY PRAISE FOR IVAN DOIG'S PREVIOUS NOVELS

For "Dancing at the Rascal Fair" (1987)

"Ivan Doig's magnificent new novel is an answer to the prayer of anyone who has loved a distant country or experienced the full-hearted enthusiasm of youth.... Part immigrant saga, part intelligent western, part sweeping romance, Dancing at the Rascal Fair further establishes its Seattle author in the front ranks of contemporary American writers....Doig writes with grace and eloquence....In this fine work of fiction, every word, every surprise, every resolution rings true."

--Michael Dorris,
The Seattle Times

"Ivan Doig is a happy mixture of poet and historian. In just nine years he has produced five truly distinctive books set in Montana and the Pacific Northwest, three of them novels. All beautifully evoke the American westering experience and firmly establish Doig as one of our finest Western writers."

--Richard Critchfield,
The Washington Post Book World

"Against a masterfully evoked backdrop, Mr. Doig addresses his real subject: love between friends, between the sexes, between the generations....Doig's prose is as tight as new thread and as special as hand-made candy...Dancing at the Rascal Fair races with real vigor and wit and passion."

--Lee. K. Abbott
The New York Times Book Review

"I find myself filled with such high praise for this book that instead of relating paltry bits of it, I want to quote the whole glorious thing....It is dazzling to watch Doig depict generous, high-spirited characters."

--Pamela Gullard,
San Francisco Chronicle

"In his impressive new novel, Dancing at the Rascal Fair, Ivan Doig stakes a claim to the mantle worn by Wallace Stegner for half a century, the reputation as our foremost recorder and interpreter of life in the historic high, dry American West. With This House of Sky, English Creek and especially this book, he has earned it....His greatest strength is exploring the coagulated feelings of human beings within the family. His characters are not the morality-play heroes of the genre Western, but real people, tangled in their feelings, handicapped by their deficiencies, deeply decent, yearning for closeness, finding it only intermittently. Their melancholy dance of life is rendered with exquisite nuance."

--Winifred Blevins,
Los Angeles Times Book Review

"Ivan Doig's Dancing at the Rascal Fair is one of the rarest treats a reader may enjoy: a novel to be savored from word to word, page to page -- a realistic tale of pioneer Scottish ranchers battling for survival in the northernmost reaches of Montana, told in the lyrical prose and sly idiomatic wit that was their heritage from remote Gaelic ancestors."

--Noland Norgaard,
The Denver Post

--more--

"Doig's ability to capture in print the many conflicting emotions, phobias and dreams of all human beings is so rare that he has to be a very special person himself....This is a beautiful piece of work."

--Jeff Guinn,
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

For "English Creek" (1984)

"Doig seems to be one of those enviable writers whose every book is better than the previous one. The new novel is full of good writing and the sweat and tears and laughter of hardworking plain people...[Ivan Doig's writing] is more virile than [Paul] Horgan and less romantic than [Wallace] Stegner. A truer comparison might be with Robert Louis Stevenson because of Doig's magical welding of history with fiction, of adventure with everyday life, of legend with lore."

--Reid Beddow,
The Washington Post Book World

"His prose is at once simple and direct, yet rich and fanciful....The voice of his narrator is so binding that the audience is propelled into the lives of the characters....This reader can't wait for the sequels."

--George Harmon,
The Chicago Sun Times

"Doig combines all of what is best about America in his story: the humor, the landscape, the ancestry of characters...The only solace in finishing this wonderful novel is the anticipation of the two more to come."

--The Chicago Tribune

"Two things make this nostalgic western novel especially delightful: old Jick's idiosyncratic theories about everything from in-laws to General Custer; and young Jick's reluctance to come of age, coupled with his precocious understanding that that's exactly what he's doing. Readers will delight in Mr. Doig's evocation of the Montana landscape through language that is tender, lyrical and forceful."

--Janice Eidus,
The New York Times Book Review

"English Creek is old fashioned in the best sense of the word: Doig is concerned with the telling of a story that entertains, and he is also concerned with the novel's moral and ethical implications....he deserves to be better known."

--James Kaufmann,
The Christian Science Monitor

"Ivan Doig has a rare, uncanny skill for bringing history to life....In English Creek, his second novel, Doig again achieves a flawless weld of fact and fiction....[The characters] stay on long after the book is closed, more colorful and enduring than the history that inspired them. No more can be asked for the storyteller's art."

--Carol Van Strum,
USA Today

"Despite its setting in the most mythic of all American landscapes, English Creek is neither nostalgic nor simple: It's too concrete and detailed in its evocation of the past....In supple, muscular prose as terse and yet redolent with meaning as the speech of Montana, Ivan Doig grapples with universal issues of character and morality."

--Wendy Smith,
Newsday

"There is...a pervasive warmth, a gentleness, an affection for those long-distant Depression years and the toughness, the innocence, and the sense of community they shaped."

--The New Yorker

RIDE WITH ME, MARIAH MONTANA
a novel by Ivan Doig
Publication Date: September 28, 1990
Price: $18.95
ISBN: 0-689-12019-2

August 1990

Ivan Doig
RIDE WITH ME,
MARIAH MONTANA

EXTRAORDINARY ADVANCE PRAISE

Spurred by the 1989 centennial of Montana's statehood, moody widower Jick McCaskill, turning 65, criss-crosses the state in a Winnebago with his photographer daughter, strong-willed, feisty Mariah, and her ex-husband, Riley, a reporter. In this crowning volume of a trilogy, which includes English Creek and Dancing at the Rascal Fair, Doig again displays a masterly skill in depicting the American West which few writers match. Instead of patriotic hoopla, the canvas is dotted with failing ranches, oil pumps clanking away in farmed fields, Montanans tensely poised between an uncertain future and a frontier past. Jick, who narrates this road story with brash humor, faces two emotional crises: Mariah precipitously announces plans to remarry Riley; and Leona, Riley's mother, who once had an ill-fated fling with Jick's dead brother, joins the caravan. This entertaining ramble adroitly blends travelogue, family drama, history and newspaper lore.

--Publishers Weekly

To conclude his Montana trilogy (see also English Creek [BKL O 15 84] and Dancing at the Rascal Fair [BKL J1 87 84]), Ivan Doig moves forward in time—and then looks back. What narrator Jick McCaskill calls “memory storms,” unprovoked assaults from the past, drive the action in this ruminative look at growing up and growing old, western style. A teenager at the time of the events in English Creek, McCaskill is 65 in 1989, a recent widower, and struggling to hold on to his beloved ranch in the face of massive societal change (“Maybe what I have known how to do all my life, which is ranching, simply does not register any more”). Reluctantly, he agrees to accompany his daughter, Mariah, a photographer, and her ex-husband, Riley, a reporter, as they tour Montana in a Winnebago, on assignment for a newspaper, gathering human-interest stories relating to the state's centennial celebration. Personal history mixes with Montana history as the trio dodge buffaloes, visit the site of Chief Joseph's surrender, and deal with unresolved familiar and marital discord. Doig continues to excel at creating a sense of place, and, as before, the grandeur of the West is effectively set against the ineffable sadness of human lives—the misconstrued motives, the coming together and the breaking apart, the private sorrows and the unrealized hopes.

--Booklist

The conclusion to Doig's Montana trilogy centered on the McCaskill family: Dancing at the Rascal Fair was set in the homesteading era, English Creek during the Depression. Here, a contemporary picaresque odyssey through Montana's centennial moves mostly on father-daughter aggravation and expertly done (and well-researched) landscapes.

Jick McCaskill, at 65, has lost his wife Marcella to cancer. His daughter Mariah, a photographer with “a chance that'll never come again,” invites him to travel in a Winnebago with her and ex-husband Riley, an impulsive, eccentric journalist, as they explore Montana à la Charles Kuralt. In a sometimes shrill, sometimes nostalgic tone, Jick narrates the ensuing journey to publication and to love. Jick has been grieving, but in the Winnebago he witnesses daughter and son-in-law seemingly fall in love again as they endlessly argue over destination, story angle, and almost everything else. We get a lot of McCaskill family history, a Blue Highways-like sampling of Montana's old geezers, grizzlies, mining country, and “true grit”; and, as Mariah looks for the right pictures and Riley builds a following that is more than regional, Jick does in fact move forward again, with the help of a heart-to-heart with Leona, Riley's mother and a widow herself. Riley proposes again to Mariah and asks her to accompany him to California, where a big paper has made him an offer. Mariah wavers but finally realizes that “you and I love just some of each other.” So things go, in a book where the narrator wisely realizes that “Enumerating is one thing and making it all add up is another.”

A paean to Montana and frontiersmanship—but also a casually artful, and triumphant, end to Doig's trilogy.

--Kirkus Reviews

To explore the meaning of Montana's century of statehood, 65-year-old Jick McCaskill, his photographer daughter Mariah, and her newspaper columnist ex-husband Riley Wright tour the Treasure State in Jick's Winnebago. While Riley writes on-the-scene dispatches and Mariah takes photos of the places they visit, Jick, the narrator, recounts the state's—and his family's—good and bad times. A lengthy picaresque with innumerable well-crafted vignettes, this leisurely novel could easily serve as a tour guide of Montana's historic places. As the miles go by, Riley and Mariah again fall in and out of love, and Jick, a widower, unexpectedly finds a new mate. The culminating volume in the McCaskill trilogy, which includes English Creek (LJ 10/1/84) and Dancing at the Rascal Fair (G.K. Hall, 1989), is highly recommended for its depiction of the past's impact on the present.

--Library Journal
(starred review)

Publication Date: September 28, 1990 ($18.95)

ISBN: 0-689-12019-2

EDITED BY SYBIL STEINBERG

Ivan Doig

His novels of the American West benefit as much from his painstaking research as they do from his poetic imagination

BY WENDY SMITH

For just under a decade, in five books resonant with the echoing spaces of the American West, Ivan Doig has examined the ways in which history and geography interact to shape individual and national character, demonstrating our membership in a "community of time" that links Americans to those who preceded us in the landscape, as well as a community of place that knits us together in a complex weave of familial and social obligations.

In This House of Sky, his sensitive memoir of growing up in Montana in the 1940s and '50s, and in Winter Brothers, an exploration of the Pacific Northwest coastline through the diaries of a man who first ventured there in the 1850s, Doig mingled past and present in discontinuous narrative that skipped around in time yet presented coherent, moving visions of human possibilities against two very different backdrops. He turned to fiction—but not away from the past—in The Sea Runners, which chronicled the escape of four men from a Russian prison in 19th century Alaska and their daring canoe journey down the Pacific coast.

Doig is delving deeper into his Montana roots in the McCaskill family trilogy on which he has been at work for the past six years. English Creek took up the family's story in the middle with the tale of 15-year-old Jick McCaskill's coming of age in the summer of 1939. His newest novel, Dancing at the Rascal Fair (Fiction Forecasts, July 31), which Atheneum is launching with a 50,000 first printing, goes back to the beginning: the arrival of young Scotsman Angus McCaskill in Montana's Two Medicine Country in 1889, the year the territory became a state. Doig expects to complete the third volume—and carry the McCaskills into the present—in time for the statehood centennial in 1989.

Wendy Smith writes frequently for PW.

Why has the American past laid such a hold on this writer's imagination? "I think it helps us to know what we are and where we are by knowing where we came from," he says. "Also, I grew up with people in Montana who had a great link to the past. They weren't educated enough in classroom terms to know factual history, but they had a lot of lore in their heads. And it was in the language, too, the sayings that showed up in my father's and grandmother's talk. Going back to Scotland three summers ago to research Rascal Fair, I found some of the turns of phrase originated there."

Doig came to the Seattle area, where he has lived for 21 years, to get a Ph.D in history, and his training is evident in the way he works. An energetic, friendly man of 48 whose glasses and gray-red beard give him a vaguely professorial air, he shows PW the file-card boxes filled with research material. "I'm a pretty literal person; I tend to imagine from facts. For example, 'Dancing at the Rascal Fair' is a traditional Scots tune—which I wrote one sleepless night. It comes from this very staunch, Scots, quasi-Marxist sociological book, Social Class in Scotland, Past and Present, where I read mention of the fact that when farmers and laborers met to bargain out the summer's wages it was called 'the rascal fair.' I like that phrase. I went to bed one night, not having a title for the book, and the next morning told Carol [his wife], 'I think it's going to be called Dancing at the Rascal Fair.' Then I bought a rhyming dictionary and worked hard on making up the song. Quite a lot of what I do comes that way, the imagination ramified by this kind of dry sociology."

Doig's uncommon ability to bring the past vividly to life stems in part from his attention to detail. "I would talk to people who had been homesteaders at the turn of the century and ask them, 'You were a school kid. How'd you get to school?' 'Well, we rode horses.' 'Okay, what'd you do with the horses?' Out of that would come bits of lore: in the sagebrush part of Montana, they'd probably hitch the horse to a bit of sagebrush; if they lived in the grassier part, the fathers would probably build a hitch rail for the school. The details of Angus's teaching came out of those sort of particulars." To help him visualize the towns he was writing about, Carol Doig took photographs of individual buildings all over Montana and Scotland. Doig arranged the slides on a light table, grouping the pictures together to get a sense of what a given street might have looked like in 1889 or 1919.

The language of Doig's books is also carefully researched. "Language led me to the McCaskill trilogy as much as anything else. I was interested in using the language of my Dad's generation in English Creek, which is narrated by a character roughly his age. Then it followed that Angus would narrate Rascal Fair in his Scottish-born voice. It was a big decision, because it takes a long time to accumulate the language for these three books. I have a file-card box called 'Montana Lingo,' and I'm working my way through The Dictionary of American Regional English to find out how language forms itself, how it comes out in everyday dance and prance—the poetry of the vernacular, because often people who don't have much else in life are very rich in language. I think what I'm up to is an attempt to write a trio of books in some of the West's own language."

The West itself—Montana in par-particular—is virtually another character in the McCaskill trilogy, and all of Doig's books display a deep attachment to the land and a profound sense of place. "Part of that was growing up in the 'great weathers' of Montana. The space is always around you in various configurations—whether it is the mountains or the plains or simply that almost endless sky—big, booming distances in the landscapes. . . . The echoes of those stay with a person. We moved to Seattle largely because of the geography: the mildness of the climate, the nearness of the water, the greenness. Place is important to me and I think to quite a number of Western writers. Richard Hugo, the great poet of Montana, has a line that always sounds to me like something he picked up in a Missoula bar: 'If you ain't noplace, you can't go nowhere.' To have a base, a plot of existence on the earth, to be familiar with its changes of the seasons, there's a kind of propulsive rhythm to that."

But the West Doig knows so intimately and writes about with such eloquence is not the West of legend. "I'm writing deliberately about sheepherding, because we've had too damn much cowboy West. I don't think that's what the West has been about, although we've got a guy in the White House who thinks so: too many movie sets will give you that idea. The West has been about families, schoolteachers, miners, fur trappers, town-builders, all kinds of people coming out here to try and make a living. I'm trying to write against the grain of what I call 'Wisterns,' after Owen Wister, the author of The Virginian. He went off from Philadelphia and Harvard and got in with some of the rich cattlemen of Wyoming. So far as he could tell, no one in the West ever had to do any work. In 'Wisterns' it's all card games and saving schoolmarms; nobody ever milks a cow or plants a spud. As best I can tell, there's got to be some kind of catering service out of Omaha that comes out and takes care of the whole damn West. It's nonsense, and I think it's harmful nonsense."

"So much of the West has been nurtured and can only be nurtured by Federal policy: the national forest, the Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management. It's an enormous, dry, fragile part of our country—what Wallace Stegner called 'a land of little rainfall and big consequences.' We've had a complex history of coming to terms with that; there's an ecologically, socially and culturally complex quilt out here from the Ohio River westward. To think that fixing it is just a matter of strapping on your chaps and sixgun is infantile nonsense. This almost tidal swash back and forth between beneficial consequences and harmful consequences interests me."

© Jim Bates

‘It seems to me there’s a new kind of eloquence that is not just an eloquence of the West, but an eloquence of the edge of the world.’

Doig's characters are always aware that actions have consequences, and the plots of his novels are often driven by the conflict between people's desires and their strong sense of responsibility. "My characters accept that in their lives they do have second thoughts, that part of what we carry around in the attic of our heads are our thoughts about the past. You feel your way along and do as much as you can, yet trying at some point to lead your own life. You're forever feeling your way along this line of equilibrium. Part of the consequence of being alive is that it's not always comfortable."

But Doig also tries to imbue his work with a sense of how many things in life are not within people's control. "My interest in history showed me that both time and the times you live in are going to change you, and I'm trying to write about that. You see in English Creek and Rascal Fair how much the two world wars dropped into people's lives out of nowhere. I was trying to use actual historical realities. First the twin calamities of World War I and the flu epidemic of 1919—one out of every 100 Montanans died. Then the fact that one year you were a kid on a ranch in Montana who'd never been further away than the 90 miles to Helena, the next year you're in the Aleutians or the South Pacific, and the year after that maybe you're dead. I'm trying to deal in fiction with the issue of history dropping on us. Of course, we hope it doesn't drop on us in the big way—in the great words of Riddley Walker, a book I greatly admire—"The One Big One."

Russell Hoban is only one of the many authors whose work Doig has warmly praised during the conversation; his strong sense of identity as a Western writer doesn't preclude a larger feeling of kinship with world literature. "I've been very much aware of being a Westerner all my life, partly because of memories of the landscape, partly because of the way I was brought up in the West through the accident of being motherless after I was six. I have in some ways the best of both worlds: I'm halfway regarded as a Montana writer, and yet I live outside. The Humanities Council in Billings asked me to talk about looking at Montana from the outside. They have finally said, 'Okay, you're an outsider at last.'

"Montana has always had this big colonial question, part of the land question: Are we simply, can we ever be, more than an energy colony to be mined? So the West has a lot in common with writers from the old outposts of the British Empire, who are often very skeptical of government and very potent. Nadine Gordimer is one of the most potent writers extant in showing the awful naked skin under her society. Then there are books like The Book of Ebenezer Le Page and Riddley Walker, which push the language out into odd, eloquent corners of the world: the Isle of Guernsey, post-Holocaust England. I'm tending toward the idea, and I don't think it's at all original with me, that there are quite a bunch of us out here at our own centers of the universe, and they're not the metropolitan, polar centers. It seems to me that there's a new kind of eloquence that is not just an eloquence of the West, but an eloquence of the edge of the world." □