Dear Cousin,

Seasons Greetings. This is a general letter to Doigs around the world. I have sufficient information on your particular ancestors, and your family history is included. I hope you will find some interesting additions since the last sending, or that you will enjoy a first receipt.

For the past several years I have been working on piecing together the Doig family history. It has been a fun and rewarding experience. But, there are surprisingly more of us than I originally expected, and I need help. The aim is to publish a Doig genealogy that includes every person and story we can find about our rare Scottish name.

I suspect that some of us were teased in school and called Dog. Our name was originally spelled Dog, but this has nothing to do with the animal. It was a Celtic nickname for Gillie Doc, or Servant of St. Cadoc. This Irish saint established a church in south Perthshire in the sixth century. It was in the present Kilmadock Parish at Doune. Kilmadock translates 'Church of my Doc,' or 'Doig's Church.' That is where we began, perhaps from a common ancestor about 750 years ago. The spelling was changed during the 18th century when its meaning in English became known. The Doigs became associated with the Drummond clan through marriage and are a sept of that clan.

I have gathered information on the Doigs across the U.S. in a hundred libraries, including Salt Lake, to Scotland twice, and in the Vatican Library. I have the Scottish Parish records on my home computer. Much of the work has been done by correspondence with other Doigs, and I am here expanding that horizon. I hope you will get excited about this project and respond with names, dates and some interesting stories.

The earliest reference I have found is that Dogs or Doigs fought with Sir Walter Stewart at the Battle of Largs in 1263. Here are a few high lights of our early ancestors.

*In 1372 Alexander Dog was vicar at Dunnichan, Forfar. This is probably the same Alexander that was choir master at Brechin, who died in 1393.

*In 1460 Walter Dog was the Chamberlain of Menteith, and keeper of the King's castle at Doune.

*In 1460 Sir Thomas Dog was on the faculty of St. Andrews University. Pope Paul II assigned him to the Priory of Inchmahome in the Lake of Menteith in 1469. He held this office by annates, or payments to the Vatican.

*In 1475 Thomas Dog is listed on the oldest charter of the Weaver trade in Dundee.

*In 1502 James Dog was Chamberlain at Doune Castle, and the poet Dunbar celebrated him in The Wardraipper of Venus Boure in the line to Queen Margaret: "Madam, ye heff a dangerous Dog!"

*In 1538 David Shaw, Hucheoun Wallace and George Dreghorne were indicted for the slaughter of the laird of Lany and mutilation of James Dog at Linlithgow. James' will was later recorded 5 Dec 1542 at Edinburgh.

*In 1548 Captain James Dog, a burges of Dundee, led an attack against English troops who landed from the sea and killed 30. He was later the Provost of Dundee.

*In 1585 George Dog, a butcher of St. Andrews, was convicted of fornication before marriage. In 1595 he bloodied the nose of John Webster in church, and he was sentenced to sit on the penitence stool clad in sackcloth for four Sundays. In 1598 he confessed to missing church and promised amendment.

*In 1634 Francie Dog of the Scots Brigade in the service of the United Netherlands was listed as captured at Callo and sent to Lillo, from the Van't Regiment van den Coll't Balfour.

*In 1672 David Doig of Reswallie was accused and indicted for calling Purser and Minister Andrews a horse thief. The high court decided there was no cause to hear and referred the matter to a lower court. David was a wealthy landowner, and some of his descendants are most interesting. His son, John, was a merchant at Brechin, an elder of the Presbyterian Church and Provost of the town. He was not popular and in 1712 there was a riot led to "beat, blood, and wound the head and other parts of the body, the said John Doig." John survived this and the rebellion of 1715 to remain in control of the town council.

John's daughter, Ann, married William Franklyn in about 1708 at St. Johns, Antigua in the Caribbean. More relatives followed and were some of the earliest settlers of this island.

John's son, David Doig, was also Provost of Brechin. He married the heiress Magdalene Symmer. David was a merchant and also involved in smuggling. In April 1733 the Christian & Magdalen of Montrose sailed north with a cargo of salt. The ship put ashore at Maiden Cove and unloaded 430 gallons of brandy. A party of 10 soldiers and Excise men surprised the smugglers and seized the brandy. Their success was short lived as a mob gathered and chased the tax men away. The brandy disappeared towards Brechin. The next day David was overheard at the inn of Kinnell to remark that "he had been in an engagement the night before at Maiden Cove with some soldiers, rescuing his brandy." He then proceeded to sell one of the casks of brandy to the innkeeper. David died in 1763. He was not well liked, and a local legend plays upon his name:

Provost Doig's Dead - God be thankit;

Many a better dog's dead, since he was whelpit.

David's daughter Christian married Sir James Carnegie.

*In 1685 Paull Dog of Ballingrue of the Perthshire Troop was one of five killed by the Camerons.

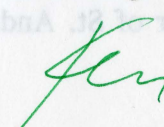

*In 1698 Stephen Doig of Trinity Parish served as a mariner on the H.M.S. Cambridge.

Overpopulation, clan wars and English occupation made Scotland a difficult place to eke a living. All the land went to the oldest son, and new lands beckoned the younger sons from across the seas. One of America's earliest settlers was George Doig, a sign painter from London, who arrived in Portsmouth, NH in 1772; his descendants spell their name Doeg.

My great-great-great-grandfather, Andrew Doig, arrived in New York in about 1798. Some of his brothers arrived in the following few years and about half of the Doigs in America and Canada are descended from this family. Some settled in Jamaica and New Zealand. These Doigs came from Murdieston farm in Kilmadock Parish, Perthshire, and the farm was in the family from about 1500.

I look forward to you adding to, or correcting the family history included. Please contact other members of your family that might have additional information. If you include addresses I will send them the latest info I have. Bye for now.

Best regards,

November 17, 1997

Greetings Ivan,

Thank you for the referrals on Doig genealogy over the last several years. I have been able to link everyone to a larger family group. My one-name study of Doig now contains over 13,000 descendants.

I now have the rudiments of a home page up on the Internet at <http://www.psnw.com/~kendoig/> if you have access. The early Dog genealogy from 1395 is there. Also, there is a short story I wrote using the background of the Doune area of Scotland.

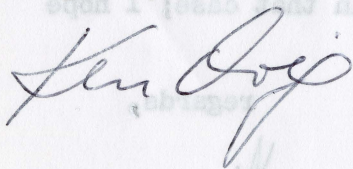

I also write long stories. I thought you might enjoy a copy of a recent rejection that gives me a mixed review but also holds you up as an inspiration. At a writing conference in Fresno earlier this year there were several publishers that praised your writing.

My work appears a bit violent for the Christian publishers I have tried, at least for the few who would read unsolicited material. I have taken the liberty to enclose the same chapters read by Dave Lambert at Zondervan.

Catacomb is the story of Jack Drummond's quest for the original Q scroll written by Saint Peter. The parchment could be the spark to ignite global holy war. The Secretary General of the United Nations wants Jack dead before he upsets his plans for world domination. Assassins pursue Jack from the Middle East into the catacombs of Rome.

If you feel my work has merit, I would appreciate a referral to a literary agent or publisher that might be interested in my style. The entire book is 100,000 words and is available to read if you are interested. Thanks for any effort.

Gang warily,

23 Nov. '97

Dear Ken---

All those Doig forebears family-treed there on the Web, hmm? Fascinating to think about, and thanks for alerting me to it.

I can't pass back the same handy sort of help, sorry to say. For scads of reasons, among them ethical and legal, I've long made it a policy not to read other people's manuscripts. So I'm enclosing your pages, alas unseen by these Doig eyes, but I did look over your letter from Zonderman to see if I can suggest anything out of that, and I'd make these points:

--Editors surprisingly often are right about what a manuscript needs, or what a reading audience will bear. I'd urge you to take Lambert's suggestions seriously.

--Also, it's very heartening news that he says he'd look at another proposal from you; editors don't have to say that. Were I you, I'd look over other manuscripts and story ideas to see if any are closer to what Lambert calls his "market," do some rewriting or other brushing up if needed, and try it on him.

--Agents etc. for your current manuscript: can't help you with specific names (my own agent and I have a longstanding truce: she doesn't tell me how to write and I don't send her referrals...she has her own scouting system, mostly for New Yorkerish literary stuff), but I'd point out the listings for both agents and editors in Literary Market Place and suggest trying sample chapters on one or the other on a sustained systematic basis. I don't know how much my experience with This House of Sky counts by now, but there we sent out samples to six editors (senior editors chosen from LMP publishing house listings) at a time, then to another six when the first batch rejected it, and so on. The lucky 13th editor bought the manuscript in that case; I hope fortune rolls the dice much the same for you.

regards,
