Grownups have all different ways of looking at a youngster who isn't theirs, from simpering to barely civil. (Proxy) gazed as if storing me up.

, Proxy said quietly but dangerously.

Proxy

"We lived on a houseboat."

Proxy:

The Duffs' first view of Easter Shannon, during Dora's night on the town in Wheeler, is as she's in a fight with another taxi dancer.

("Whew," says a man, shaking his hand in front of his chest as if having touched something hot...) She was a number,

--Easter's career is shown (working for Proxy, and being sent to the sheriff for a night, for ex) but she doesn't cross paths with the Duff family again until Darius brings her home to them. (They all recognize her?)

"Practically none." (cd use as wry response, say when someone is asked about a damworker's skills, or the sheriff's ethics, or some such; limits on behavior in Wheeler, maybe.)

Easter says?

Proxy:

What was known about her... (was not much? could be read on her surface, heard in her between-customers chat?)

Someone

Stories attached to (her.) (her Blue Eagle fight for bar-stool turf, 1st day or so she came to work there. And she has a knife? And a stash of silver dollars in Bull Durham sacks?)

"Got you going, haven't I?"

Proxy or Tam

"You can think that if you want, but you'd be wrong."

Tom (or Proxy)

"Truth in that."

Proxy

I don't give a hoot in hell (about that)

Proxy

"That's what happens in the world."

Proxy abt men: They are such dopes.

Proxy:

Hardest thing about the business, as far as she was concerned, was this male tendency to think they were all something rare.

trimmed from Velma/Jick scene: (on C's suggestion it's too sophisticated a reaction for Jick at 14)

Sure, there could be found a few battlelines at the corners of her eyes and across her forehead; but right then they simply seemed to confirm to me that Velma knew what to do with all this arsenal of hers.

was pretty sure

Easter knew all.
