

book idea:

kid's book, something like The World of Toast.

--Kay Pride told me her grandfather, I think a geography prof, taught her to take bites out of her toast to make shapes of countries.

--during the Whistling bktour, someone else told me that when she was a little girl her older brothers cd whistle, and she couldn't and longed to; her father told her if she would eat the crusts of her toast she would be able to whistle.

--possible title: Taste the Toast
