Powell’s linking up with hub at Cedar Hills Crossing

After 20 years at Cascade Plaza, the giant bookseller will be in its new home by year’s end.

By DAVID R. ANDERSON
THE OREGONIAN

BEAVERTON — Powell’s Books announced Thursday that it is moving its Beaverton store to Cedar Hills Crossing, cementing the shopping center as the city’s retail and cultural heart.

“It’s becoming the new downtown, and we like to be in those center urban areas where people can walk,” said Emily Powell, daughter of founder Michael Powell and the company’s director of used books. “Certainly that landscape at Cedar Hills Crossing has been able to develop a lot of energy.”

Powell’s will leave its home of about 20 years at the Cascade Plaza shopping center, across Oregon 217 from Washington Square.

The Cedar Hills Crossing deal with Powell’s continues a string of successes for C.E. John Co., the developer rejuvenating the former Beaverton Mall. By locating inside the mall, Powell’s addresses the center’s one weakness: lagging business for interior tenants.

“It’s a monster deal,” said Mark Perciconi, C.E. John vice president. “It’s the missing link for the whole redevelopment. We couldn’t have asked for anything better.”

Scheduled to open in November, Powell’s will join other Portland stalwarts New Seasons Market, G.I. Joe’s and McMennamins at Cedar Hills Crossing, Best Buy, Century Theatres and LA Fitness also have moved into the area in recent years. And Standard TV & Appliance just opened a showroom across Southwest Cedar Hills Boulevard.

“This is where tenants want to be in Beaverton,” Perciconi said. “We’re trying to be the community shopping center for Beaverton.”

The new Powell’s store will be 32,500 square feet, about double the size of the current Beaverton store. Powell’s flagship store in downtown Portland is 70,000 square feet, Powell said.

The new store will be at the mall’s south end near G.I. Joe’s, with entrances from the mall’s exterior. Most of the stores displaced by Powell’s will be relocated inside, leaving the mall’s interior nearly fully rented, Perciconi said.

Harsch Investment Corp., which owns Cascade Plaza, is planning a major redevelopment of the mall and plans to tear down Powell’s current building. Harsch tried to keep Powell’s as a tenant, but company president Jordan Schnitzer said he understands the attraction of Cedar Hills Crossing.

“I think it’s the best redevelopment of a shopping center I’ve ever seen,” he said. “The parking lot tells you whether you’re right or wrong, and the parking lot is packed.”

Harsch is close to naming new tenants for its center, Schnitzer said.

The new location also puts Powell’s a few blocks south of the Borders bookstore that some credit with starting Beaverton Mall’s rebirth in 1996.

Borders executives don’t consider Powell’s competition, said Dan Eichler, the national chain’s district marketing manager. The two stores are different enough — Borders sells music and Powell’s sells books — that they should complement each other.

Powell agrees. “The more readers you have in one space, the better,” she said.

Court OKs casino ballot measures

Ballot measures seeking to turn the defunct Multnomah Kennel Club into a casino have been approved by the Oregon Supreme Court, supporters said Thursday.

Lake Oswego entrepreneurs Bruce Studer and Matthew Rossman say they have arranged millions of dollars in financing to build the state’s first nontribal casino at the now-closed greyhound park in Wood Village.

But the approval, confirmed by the state attorney general’s office, leaves Rossman and Studer with only a month to collect more than 175,000 signatures needed to get the measures on the November ballot.

The casino backers tried to begin gathering signatures several months ago. But the state attorney general’s office has twice forced them to rewrite their initiatives to pass constitutional muster.

One of the measures would amend the Oregon Constitution to allow one commercial casino. The other would site the casino at the former track and direct that 25 percent of the gambling revenues go to the state.

Roger Gray, the political consultant handling the initiative drive, said he is confident he can gather the needed signatures by the July 7 deadline.

The Oregon Department of Education on Thursday reinstated the license of Gresham’s Academy of Alternatives school, which lost its permission to operate after failing to perform a required background check on a staff member who now determine whether there was criminal wrongdoing.

“This is not a simple matter of missing paperwork,” Castillo said. “These requirements are in place to protect students, and I take the violation by the Academy of Alternatives very seriously.”

Castillo is recommending changes to the state law that would allow the department to revoke the license of any alternative school under such circumstances.

Jay Scalise, director of the academy, said he would support any of turnaround would meet with staff today to determine the next steps.

The Reynolds School District rents the academy building and sends district staff to work with the 40 students who normally attend the school from the district.

Andrea Watson, Reynolds’ community relation coordinator, said the district will send its own staff and the students to the academy today then begin discussing whether to transition students back into the academy’s program.

Dear Paul--

Here's the ARC of The Bartender's Tale for you high-seas reading. I've thought a bit about your point of what can we do to maximize the event and turnout, and a couple of things occur. First, you can tell your customers or advertise it or whatever that I'll be glad to personalize books, including those ordered beforehand with inscriptions provided. (If this produces much, I'll need to get to the store well ahead of time to hole up somewhere and handle those books.) Second, I could do an added attraction, bonus reading, whatever it might be called, by reading from the manuscript of the Whistling Season and Work Song sequel that I'm working on which features probably my most popular character ever, Morrie the one-room schoolteacher and then Butte habitue, as well as the expected reading from The Bartender's Tale. A world premiere for Lake Oswego, how's that?! I'd keep 'em both within reasonable length, so we can get on with the business of selling books, naturally. Let me know what you think--let's talk just after Labor Day, okay?

Best wishes,
Hello,

We still have open dates for our 2007 literary event series here at Paulina Springs Books. It is our hope that Ivan Doig would be interested in coming to Sisters, Oregon to promote The Whistling Season in our bookstore. Sometime in the month of July would work well for us, but we would entertain any dates that Ivan is available. Typically, we hold our readings in the evening at 6:30, which provides time for us to prepare refreshments and seating for the people attending.

Paulina Springs Books is located in a small tourist town with a charming Western style and great mountain views. Despite our size and remote location, our literary series is very popular and often draws an audience larger than booksellers in cities. We aggressively promote the events through advertisements, calendar listings in local papers, the statewide Oregonian paper, postings in strategic areas about town, and through our monthly email newsletter. Because Sisters is in such a beautiful location, many authors simply enjoy the opportunity to visit.

If you think Ivan might be interested in coming to Paulina Springs Books this year, please contact us by any of the following methods:

email - books@paulinasprings.com

mail - Paulina Springs Books
       PO Box 3500-407
       Sisters, OR 97759

phone - (541) 549-0866

Please include in your response the form of communication you prefer we use in future correspondence (plus appropriate contact person, email address, phone, etc.)

We look forward to your response,

Amanda MacNaughton

Dear Amanda--

Sorry about the delay in anybody responding to you, but your Feb. 14 letter to Harcourt about a possible booksigning re-crossed the country and just now reached me. I have good memories of the booksigning I did in Sisters some years ago and of course the country around there, but this is a year when I am entirely off the bookstore trail after a coast-to-coast schedule last year. So I’m going to have to say, not this time around, Amanda. I’m a year or so from finishing up the next book and it will take Harcourt some time to do its publishing and scheduling, so the next availability is likely a year and half or two from now. Although I can’t promise anything, I am game to look at the situation with you at that time, if you’d like. Probably the most direct way to be in touch is to write me at the above address or call Harcourt publicist Michelle Blankenship (212) 592-1023 at that time. Meanwhile, all good wishes to you and your colleagues at the store.

Sincerely,
October 18, 2005

Dear Ivan,

Thank you for appearing at the debut of Wordstock last April. Your reading helped attract over 25,000 people in the two days of the festival. Since the first year was so successful, we have scheduled the second annual Wordstock for April 22nd and 23rd, 2006.

I would like to formally invite you to be part of our second edition. You would be a top local headliner at the book fair portion of the festival at the Oregon Convention Center on April 22 or 23, 2006. We would love it if you could talk about your book or answer questions for 30-45 minutes with a book signing to follow.

But Wordstock is more than just a festival; it is a benefit for writing education in Oregon’s schools through Community of Writers.

Community of Writers is a non-profit organization whose job is to facilitate the teaching of creative writing in Portland’s public schools through teacher workshops and visits by writers to the schools. All proceeds from Wordstock go to support the work of that wonderful organization.

In addition to reading, we would like to extend the opportunity to teach a workshop for teachers and/or writers.

Wordstock for Teachers will be held at the Oregon Convention Center on Friday, April 21, 2006. It offers K-12 teachers of writing the rare opportunity to earn professional development credits during a one-day immersion into the craft of teaching students to write. These workshops will have the chance to listen to lectures or be led in exercises and discussions in methods of writing to apply in their classrooms. Compensation for workshops is $200/hour.

Please let me know if you are interested and what type of class you would like to teach.

Wordstock for Writers - Because of the enormous success of our living room workshops last year we are creating a more extensive program of workshops taking place in and around the book fair at the Convention Center. These workshops will focus on the art of writing and can be for adults and for children. Classes will be offered in Fiction, Nonfiction, Publishing, Screenwriting, writing Children’s Books, and general writing discovery workshops for children. Compensation for workshops is $200/hour.

Please let me know if you are interested and what type of class you would like to teach.

If you have any questions please feel free to contact me, Laura Howe at 503-546-1012 or laura@wordstockfestival.com.

I look forward to working with you again.

All the Best,

Laura Howe

Ivan Doig earned a spot in the canon of contemporary Western writers with his memoir of growing up on a rugged Montana ranch, This House of Sky, a book of prose the author intended to be “as highly charged as poetry.” The former ranch hand and journalist is the author of nine books, including the bestselling novel about Montana homesteaders, Dancing at the Rascal Fair.

Alison, good morning--

I have been in touch with Scott Poole about the Portland Wordstock event, and agreed to participate there the evening of April 22 and the morning of the 23rd. Wordstock will cover the hotel room for Carol and me that night, apparently no problem. That leaves mileage for our drive to Portland and I think three meal tabs. (It looks like it would be lunch on the 22nd, breakfast and lunch on the 23rd.) Anything I have to know about the billing process, or would I just send you the receipts?

Slowly, slowly, Brant Rumble and I are getting some cover art with some life in it for the trio of paperbacks. There are a couple of events I've been asked to do here in the Puget Sound area that should eventuate into signings--will keep you apprised.

Best,

Ivan Doig
one-page FAX to Alison Kling, Scribner publicity

Alison, hello again--

The dates of the Portland Wordstock fall very close to Carol’s and my 40th anniversary, which we were going to celebrate with a lengthy significant trip somewhere. With a considerable intake of breath, we’re willing to amend that and attend Wordstock if they and/or you will put us up a couple of nights at the downtown Portland hotel we’ve singled out as the most workable for us, of various places we’ve tried on the past several book-tour trips. It’s the Westin Portland (503)294-9000—not super-fancy, just fairly new and convenient and comfortable and a place we’re familiar with. So, if that can specifically be made to happen, I’m game for Wordstock and you should feel free to have the organizers talk to me directly about my participation.

Couple of further logistics: Carol and I would drive to Portland, saving somebody a lot of airfare. If the hotel deal is okay with everybody, whoever does the booking should request for us early arrival, two beds, non-smoking, west-facing view, please.

Looking forward to working with you again; going to be interesting to have three “new” books to push, hmm?

Best,
Suggest you tell Alison that we'll incorporate Wordstock into our 40th anniversary celebration, and we want to stay downtown for 2 nights (and early arrival) at the Westin Portland, 750 SW Alder. Phone (503) 294-9000.

Two beds, non-smoking, west-facing view.
*We'll drive, so transportation is no problem.

Yr lvg spouse
Dear Ivan,

How are you? I hope you’re having a nice fall out in Seattle.

I’m writing out of the blue because we’ve had a request for your presence at a great book festival in Portland next April, and the timing would work out for the paperbacks of Prairie Nocturne and Ride With Me, Mariah Montana. It’s called “Wordstock”, on April 23-24. They’ll cover hotel and possibly travel (if not, we can cover), and here are details:

Authors already committed include John Irving, Norman Mailer, Alice Sebold, Chris Bohjalian, Kent Haruf, Dr. Andrew Weil, Philip Yancey, Russell Banks, Craig Leslie, Whitney Otto, and Susan Orlean. We expect over 20,000 people through the two days of the book fair portion of the festival in which your authors would be appearing. 200-300 people should see every author. There will be lots of advertising and media sponsorship. An appearance at the festival by an author also means a chance for multiple events. (i.e. A reading in the morning, A panel in the afternoon.) We anticipate this will double possible book sales.

What do you think? You’re one of their top requests for the festival.

Thanks & I’ll talk to you soon.

Best,
Alison

Poll: Balance rights, land use

Respondents strongly back protection of private property rights in Oregon, but must also back public growth planning

By LAURA OPPENHEIMER AND JAMES WATER

SACRAMENTO — By passing Measure 37 last fall, Oregon voters rejected their governor’s plan to severely restrict their land use, but they also backed agricultural and urban sprawl.

Oregon residents like the state’s nationally recognized land-use program, but want it to make more sense, according to the first major poll conducted since the landmark property rights ballot measure took effect.

In a telephone survey of 1,005 registered voters, the Mason-Dixon pollsters found that a majority are ready to help pay for growth in urban areas where many of the state’s biggest cities are located.

The voters closely divided over the ballot measure, which maintained that property owners have a right to build on their land without interference, and even if harmed more by other developments.

Despite the measure’s defeat, a majority of voters favor protecting property rights at the same time as protecting the environment and wildlife habitat. And 60 percent chose individual rights over their responsibility to the community.

On the other hand, more than two-thirds said growth management, or planning and growth management, is important to them.

Oregonians were also split on the state’s land-use rules, with 32 percent saying they don’t know enough about the rules to say.

Bill would reopen window for lawsuits involving Vioxz

Pharmaceutical companies and Republicans oppose a change that would give Oregonians more time to file suits

By JEFF MAPES

SACRAMENTO — Hundreds of Oregonians with strokes and heart attacks linked to the painkiller Vioxx could sue the drug’s manufacturer much earlier under a bill the Senate Commerce Committee passed Monday.

The united opposition of Republican committee members to the Senate measure that would extend the statute of limitations for lawsuits against Vioxx makers Pfizer said he handed out a long list of benefits to the family. He was allowed to film the story of his daughter, who was killed by a police officer.

The school board tells the Lakewood High Pacer Club to make a request for permission after gathering more input

For the second time, the board’s indepen- dent investigator will take a look at the records to see if Lakewood High School’s Pacer Athletic Club, which sold advertising space, violated the district’s open meetings policy. Board members on Monday, Oct. 22, gave the investigator a work order to do the investigation. The board had previously hired the investigator to look into the advertising space issue and found there were violations of the district’s open meetings policy.

The board had said the Lakewood High Pacer Club would sell advertising space in 2005-2006. The Pacer Athletic Club sold ad space to 10 local businesses for the 2005-2006 school year, according to the board.

one-page fax to Lilia Villasenor, Manager, OHS Museum Store

Lilia, hello--

Marianne’s intuition was right on the mark. My publisher, Scribner, has been busily laying out my schedule of appearances for my next book, Prairie Nocturne, this autumn. By now you may have heard from the publicist there, Alison Kling, confirming that I can be on hand for you on Dec. 7, and we look forward to hearing full details in September about this year’s Authors’ Party. In the past they’ve been wonderful events, one of the most enjoyable things I do on the bookstore trail.

On the basis of past experience, let me pass along a few thoughts about my backlist books as well as Prairie Nocturne. I now have nine such books, and if you’re able to stock in all of them, that’s ideal. But if you need to pick and choose, or to order some books more heavily than others, I can tell you that at previous Authors’ Parties these are my paperbacks that have sold particularly well:

This House of Sky
Winter Brothers
The Sea Runners

English Creek
Dancing at the Rascal Fair

Whatever array of my work you choose, I’ll of course be glad to sign up any excess of the books you order, for your store stock after the event. If past history is any guide, we should both do well on Dec. 7.

Sincerely,
Portland Borders events coordinator: Dan Eichler (503)221-9814
Controversy Speeds Sales

The 10,000-copy first printing of Randy Thornhill and Craig T. Palmer’s A Natural History of Rape: Biological Bases of Sexual Coercion, originally planned for April 2000 publication, was crashed out to stores January 19, and a reprint is now in the works.

MIT Press made the decision for the bump-up, which bypasses waiting for trade reviews (including PW), following some very prominent prepub features on the book in the New York Times (on January 15) and USA Today (January 18), among others. A January 18 appearance on CNN by Thornhill, a biologist, and Palmer, an anthropologist, was just the beginning of a broadcast blitz, which included The CBS Early Show with Bryant Gumbel, Good Morning America and Extra.

MIT Press publicity manager Gita Manaktala told PW the house always knew it had a controversial book on its hands—the authors argue the politically charged view that rape is a “natural biological phenomenon as much a part of nature as other undesirable happenings like thunderstorms, epidemics and tornadoes,” and women are well-advised to consider how they dress and socialize to account for it.

But the press was surprised how much the science media picked up on the early excerpt of the book, which ran in the January/February issue of the relatively obscure The Sciences, a magazine published by the New York Academy of Scientists.

MIT had thought its major media break would be a planned prepub feature in Newsweek, tentatively scheduled for a month prior to the book’s original pub date. When editors from The Sciences, which had planned to excerpt the book in its March/April issue, called to say they needed to bump the excerpt up to an earlier issue, MIT and Newsweek agreed, thinking it wouldn’t steal much thunder.

So much for that theory.

The Sleeper

A Bio to Di For

Quite a lot, and that’s even before the review reached most consumers.

Random House ordered three more printings for this first book by Amanda Foreman, thanks to this placement, as well as a growing pile of good media (a starred PW review on December 13, 1999, coverage in the New Yorker, the Wall Street Journal, Elle, Vogue, W, New York and others). The book’s initial 15,000-copy printing is now supplemented by a 25,000 more, for a new grand total of 40,000 copies in print.

Of course, Foreman’s book already had a lot of a lot of potential sales hooks: the bio was a bestseller in Britain and won a Whitbread Prize in 1996. And since its colorful, scandalous 18th-century subject is the great-great-great-aunt of that perennially bio favorite, Princess Diana, the book has an extra appeal for those already interested in the lives of 18th-century British noblewomen, just given play in the PBS series Aristocrats, based on Stella Tillyard’s nonfiction book of the same name.

Angelica Huston is rumored to be close to optioning rights to Georgiana’s story, which has all those juicy elements of addictions, adulteries and, oh, of course, history and politics, although some of the arcane bits of the latter elements have been trimmed for this U.S. edition.

And what’s next for 31-year-old Foreman, who originally wrote this book as part of her grad research at Oxford? Foreman told PW she’s working on a nonfiction book about Brit who came over to fight in the American Civil War. Hopefully, for sales purposes, some Diana ancestors were involved there, too.

Shipping Slows At Random

The installation of SAP software at Random House's huge Westminster, Md., warehouse at the beginning of January appears to be one of the causes of major delays recently in the fulfillment and shipping of Random titles, in addition to bad weather on the Eastern seaboard, a scheduled warehouse shutdown at the end of December and generally increased demand.

According to figures obtained by PW, the Westminster distribution center had a backlog of one million units as of January 6. Of those books, nearly half were shipped, leaving the balance unfilled. As orders continued to come in, the backlog grew, and by January 10, even workers on Saturday shifts couldn't stem the tide of a 2.1 million-unit backlog. Over the next two weeks, orders picked up, and a snowstorm didn't help. At one point in mid-January, the backlog has swelled to nearly 2.3 million, though insiders say that number is dropping and that about 85% of January orders had been shipped by the end of the month.

When SAP, a German software system, works, it's supposed to be beautiful: it integrates software systems within a company; in this case that includes ordering, warehouse, marketing and editorial systems. However, many American companies have had notorious, well-documented difficulties installing the system. Bertelsmann endured many problems when it installed the system three years ago in its BDD warehouse in Des Plaines, Ill. Despite the startling numbers, sources say that when the process is complete, the upheaval from the SAP implementation is likely to be less dramatic than the BDD debacle, when orders were either going to the wrong stores or not shipping at all.

Random House executives maintained that demand for big titles, such as movie tie-ins, and weather conditions also contributed to the delays. In addition, recent installation of SAP, bad weather, bestsellers and new policies blamed for delivery delays.

SAP is a marvelous system but the learning curve is steep.

Powell's: The Big Get Bigger

The completion of a major expansion and remodeling at Powell's City of Books in Portland, Ore., has made the country's largest independent bookstore even larger. Growing from the city block on Burnside Avenue that the store already occupies, the new three-floor tower doubles the retail space to 68,000 square feet. Built at a cost of $3.5 million, the tower makes Powell's printed maps of store sections even more necessary.

The store expanded sections for fine art, photography and foreign language titles as well as an area designed for author appearances and art showings that can seat 250 people. The children's section also doubled in size, and chairs and benches were added throughout the store. According to general manager Miriam Sontz, "We tried to listen to our customers, and these changes reflect the changing interests of our readers."

The reconfiguration includes a dramatic new entryway at NW 11th and Couch Streets. One side is supported by a sandstone column that is carved with eight books reflecting the wealth and breadth of world literature: Shakespeare's Hamlet, the Hindu Mahabharata, the Hebrew Psalms, The 1001 Arabian Nights, Melville's Moby-Dick, the Chinese Tao Te Ching and Tolstoy's War and Peace. Each title is carved in its original language. The square base for the pillar is inscribed with a Northwest variation on Latin idiom that reads Carpe Librum, Coeme Librum, Lege Librum, Vende Librum, or "Seize the Book, Buy the Book, Read the Book, Sell the Book."

Union Blues
Since April 1999, nonmanagement workers at Powell's have been involved in unionizing as ILU Local 5. Contract negotiations between the ILU (International Longshore and Warehouse Union) began last September 14 and are continuing.

According to ILU spokesperson Marcy Rein, the expansion could have a serious impact on the unionizing process. Some pro-union workers have complained that Powell's management is discouraging newly hired employees from joining their co-workers in union efforts. However, according to Mary Winzig, a pro-union employee at Powell's who has heard of the "new employee lunches," many of the new workers are supportive of the union and are bringing new enthusiasm to the process. Some workers who originally voted against the union have now become part of the negotiating team.

"There is a sense that something bigger than any one of us is at stake," Winzig told PW. "When the tower was completed and when we were able to see financial statements, something clicked with many employees. This business is thriving. I have worked here for five years—I am a purchaser with responsibility for thousands of budget dollars—and I get paid $8.75 per hour."

For her part, Sontz stated that Powell's is very interested in completing a fair contract agreement with the union and is satisfied with the progress of the negotiations. —BARBARA KOETHER

Mr Ivan Doig
c/o Literary Arts Inc.
720 SW Washington #700
Portland, Oregon 97205

Dear Ivan,

I was one of the drama finalist, but the reason I'm writing is to tell you that I thought you did a terrific job as the master of ceremonies and I hope you'll do it again next year. We had a wonderful introducer in Brian Booth, but you run a close second. You were smart, respectful and funny and gave the show some class. Good job! Sorry we didn't meet this time. I'll catch you next year.

Warmest Regards,

Jan Baross
May 15, 1996

Come back to Bloomsbury—livan Doig, livan Doig.

What more can I say? I practically accosted you several summers ago as you were leaving Bloomsbury (a sharp employee recognized your name on the check), introduced myself, and invited you to come back next time you were in Ashland.

Perhaps "next time" could be this summer or fall. You have many Doig fans in this small literate community including myself. I've been enchanted by your writing since I first read Dancing at the Rascal Fair in 1987. I was hooked, reading backwards and forwards in your work, and just finished Bucking the Sun. You do tell a fine story. And your settings have enormous pull; my husband grew up in Montana (Bozeman), our children were born there, and we have a breath-taking 50 acres near the Idaho border.

But Oregon has been home for 20 years. My partners and I created Bloomsbury Books out of a little money, lots of work, and big ideas 15 years ago. We quite love being independent booksellers in this community. Although we don't get many noted writers, the ones that come are the ones we truly want: Rita Dove, Isabel Allende, and you perhaps?

I'm enclosing a sheet reminding you of Ashland's enticing attributes with hopes you might come for rest and theater after your book tour. We would very much like to have an hour of your time. Perhaps you could read from Bloomsbury. Our customers love readings.

I would be happy to make arrangements for good seats for one (or more) of the festival plays and to find accommodations. If the idea of coming to Ashland is at all appealing, please call me at Bloomsbury or at home (541-468-8833). Bring your wife. Your being here would enrich us all.

Many thanks,

Nancy Peterson
co-owner Bloomsbury
TEN REASONS WHY AN AUTHOR WOULD WANT TO VISIT ASHLAND OREGON

1. Ashland is an easy-going, small town (19,000) fifteen miles from the California border. It's a great place to vacation and enjoys surprising diversity.

2. Ashland is culturally rich and the home of the Tony Award winning Oregon Shakespeare Festival. The Festival performs not only classic Shakespeare indoors and outdoors, but also exciting contemporary plays by playwrights such as Mamen, Stoppard, and Heaney. Visitors can see eleven plays in three theaters running from February through October each year.

3. Enjoy fine weather, clean air, and nearby mountain lakes. Fishing, hiking, golfing, white water rafting, and bicycling are all available in or near Ashland.

4. Experience art galleries, theaters (in addition to Shakespeare), museums, and bookstores one might expect in a larger city.

5. Ashland is on Interstate 5 almost midway between Portland and San Francisco. Easy airline connections from Medford, 15 miles north.

6. The community abounds with fine restaurants (40), motels, and bed and breakfast inns (50). Bring your family.

7. Ashland is a highly literate community and home of Southern Oregon State College, a four-year liberal arts college which is part of the Oregon system of Higher Education.

8. Music lovers delight in the Peter Britt Music Festival located in nearby Jacksonville. From June through Labor Day Britt offers classical, bluegrass, jazz, and ethnic artists--nationally known--in a beautiful outdoor setting.

9. Lithia Park is Ashland's crown jewel, a 90 acre park in the center of town with miles of footpaths beside the creek, a bandshell for concerts and ballet, duck ponds, a playground, Japanese garden, tennis courts, and solitude.

10. Bloomsbury Books, Ashland's oldest and most complete bookstore, invites you to see Ashland, sign books at your convenience, meet some of your readers, and spend an hour with us. Your presence sells books and enhances the reputation of our independent bookstore.

   We would be pleased to arrange Shakespeare or Britt tickets for you and help you find a place to stay. Contact co-owner Nancy Peterson at 541-488-0029.
17 July '96

Dear Nancy—

I held off until now to answer your invitation to come and sign books on the chance that I could arrange an Ashland visit this fall, but the schedule was then filled. Part of the problem is the immense (10-week) book tour I've done for Bucking the Sun, part is a spate of literary citizenship tasks yet ahead (e.g. Bookfest, exceeding both the Oregon Book Awards and Washington Gov's Awards, etc.). So, I'm sorry but I just can't take on anything more for a while, if I'm ever to get started on a next book. I do have a fondness for your store and Ashland, and have you in mind sometime when Carol and I head your direction; but nothing is in the plans soon. Thanks for thinking of me.

best,
