UM actor wins top award

J. William Degel

Winners in the various Rocky Mountain Theatre Association competitions were announced during the RMTA business luncheon last Saturday. The winner and alternate of the Irene Ryan Scholarship Award were also announced.

Rich Hutzler, University of Montana, was named as the winner of the Ryan Award. In addition to the $500 regional scholarship, Hutzler will go on to Washington, DC, and compete for the $2,000 national scholarship. In the event that Hutzler is unable to compete, Tim Quinn, Montana State University, will compete in Washington, as the alternate entry.

There were no awards in the Undergraduate Division for Scene Design. There was also no award for first place in the Graduate Division although Patti Henry, UM, was the second place winner with her scene design entry for "The Zoo Story."

The first place winner in the Graduate Division of Costume

Design competition was Michael Egan, Utah State, for his designs for Utah's production of "The Importance of Being Earnest." There was no award for first place in the Undergraduate Division, but Shawn Burrows of Weber State took second for his designs for "Hansel and Gretel." Honorable mentions went to Andrea Morgan, Brigham Young University, for "The Would-Be Gentlemen"; and to Joyce Hanson, UM, for "School For Scandal."

Sid Perkes, chairman of the American College Theater Association, Region 4, congratulates Rich Hutzler upon his selection as regional Irene Ryan Scholarship Award winner.

Exponent interview

Baucus doesn't care who runs

Western District Congressman Max Baucus was in Bozeman last weekend as part of a statewide tour kicking off his campaign for the United States Senate. Baucus had a few extra minutes, and he talked to Exponent Associate Editor Bruce Burrows about various topics.

Exponent: People are wondering if there's going to be any change in your plans with the events of the last two weeks. Will there be?

Baucus: No. None at all. I really don't care who runs, and who doesn't run. A lot of names surface; a lot of names fall by the wayside. I run all my campaigns on what I think is important for Montana, what I believe in, what I don't believe in. I don't run against anybody, rather on what I think is important. I try to be as positive as I possibly can. It doesn't make any difference to me who does or doesn't run because that's largely irrelevant.

Exponent: Were you surprised by the appointment of Paul Hatfield?

Baucus: Yeah, I was. In my own mind I was trying to think of possible names of people who might be appointed and frankly, I was personally in favor of Mrs. Metcalf. But I was very surprised because his name didn't come to mind.

Exponent: President Carter recently came out with the new budget. Do you think a half-trillion dollars is too much or, too little?

Baucus: The budget is really only a two per cent increase, after you cut out inflation, over last year, compared with a four per cent increase in the gross national product; that is, how much the economy is going to be growing this coming year. This means that the economy is going to be growing at a rate faster, in fact double, what the increase in the federal budget will be. So I don't think that's too great, in fact I'm glad to see that it's not an increase that's greater than the GNP. There is a problem with the budget though. One is that it cuts down agriculture, whereas it increases other portions. My personal feeling is, particularly for us in Montana, that's not good. As a member of the appropriations committee in the House, I will be trying to reinstate some of the agricultural programs. In fact, I'm on the Agricultural Appropriations Subcommittee. That's the subcommittee that deals with the USDA budget. I'll be doing what I can there to try to redress that imbalance and get that money back for Montana.

State rep wants to weed out UM "rats"

MISSOULA (KNS)—Since the University of Montana is cutting faculty anyway, now is the time to "weed out" the UM professors "that teach and preach" against the American tradition, according to Rep. Paul Pistoria, D-Great Falls.

Stating that he is "perurbed" by the way 19 UM "professors" have conducted themselves "at the expense of the taxpayer," the 70-year-old one-term legislator suggested they be the first to be "terminated."

Pistoria made his suggestion in a hand-written letter sent to Commissioner of Higher Education Lawrence Pettit last month.

Of the 19 on the list, six are actually former graduate students and two are professors who are no longer at UM.

Angry that "some good professors" are being laid off at the university, Pistoria said in a recent interview, "The 19 rats, as I call them, they ought to pack their bags and go to Russia."

The 19 first got on Pistoria's blacklist in 1975 after most of them spoke out against the construction of Colstrip Units 3 and 4. In a telephone interview recently, Pistoria called the 19 "un-American" for protesting the Colstrip project.

UM President Richard Bowers said last week that Pistoria's list "had no impact on the university's decision" on faculty cutbacks.

Pistoria is a former employee of Montana Power. He was an assistant division superintendent when he retired in 1972 after 45 years with the company.

Physics professor would increase MSU budget while cutting inflation

MSU professor Kenneth Nordtvedt is making a run at state legislature. The 38-year-old Nordtvedt, a research physicist, filed to run as a Republican for the seat being vacated by Dorothy Bradley, who is a candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives.

Nordtvedt said in a press release last week the issue of inflation can be faced at state level. Nordtvedt believes the solution is simple. "Index the state income tax brackets and deductions to inflation," he said. Nordtvedt said that low-income groups are the hardest hit by inflation, increasing their tax rate by 148 per cent over the past eight years.

Nordtvedt also said that he would "actively, but diplomatically" promote the MSU budget in the state legislature.

Nordtvedt added that he supports returning authority for property appraisal back to the local county level.

"I will feel better if local citizens can guide their growth, rather than having it mandated by the state," he explained.

SUBJECTIVELY SPEAKING

Students of the State, Unite!

The University of Montana (UM) and MSU have as much in common as two squabbling brothers. The similarities far outnumber the differences.

One gets the same feeling of superiority from both universities in regard to the other. Some UM students view MSU students as a bunch of cowboy-farmer blobs unconcerned with the detestable state of world and state affairs.

On the other hand, many MSU students feel that UM students are a "left" over pocket of the '60s, unwilling to change with the times. They seek out trouble spots just for the opportunity to stage protest.

Both viewpoints are stereotyped absurdities.

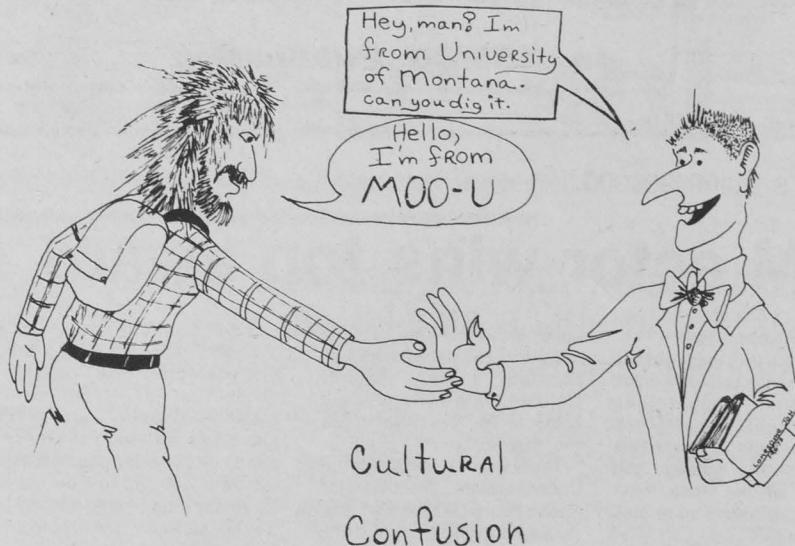

The basis of MSU's superiority complex stems from fluctuating enrollment in MSU's favor. It has often been half-heartedly proposed by MSU faculty to control shifting student enrollment between the two universities by raising MSU standards of admission, thus forcing the unaccepted to attend the UM.

The difference between social science students and physical science students equals the difference between MSU students and UM students. In reality, the overall beliefs seeping from both institutions are very much alike. Perhaps the UM atmosphere (I'm not talking about the pulp mills) evokes a more radical approach to world problems.

Indeed the feeling around the state is that UM tends toward political radicalism. But neither campus has exclusive claim to either end of the political spectrum. There are radical MSU personnel and conservative UM personnel.

It is time institutions of higher education in Montana unite as brothers to work collectively for the benefit of Montana's higher education. It is time we quit squabbling over trivialities. We stand for the same thing. We are like two cats fighting, or bears, while Anaconda Copper steaks its claim on the meat.

$9,000 burn

Dear Editor:

The recent prepayment rise from 30 dollars to 100 dollars will cause students to lose around 9,000 dollars. That's right 9,000 bucks. The school will collect $100 payments from students about six months in advance of the school year. With approximately 3,000 students paying, the school is sitting on $300,000. Interest on that amount at 6 percent over a sixth-month period is $9,000. The point is that the students lose the chance to invest that money how they see fit. It's their money and their right to do with what they want. Now the university is making it necessary to pay this outrageous amount to them and they now decide how to use that money until they deduct it from our fees in the fall. The school could be investing this money in short term stocks and bonds and making a killing with our hard-earned money. They take this opportunity away from us. It's a rip off. Besides who can scrape together a hundred bucks spring quarter. I had a hard time getting 30.

Dear Editor:

Does winter quarter seem to be flying by? Do tests seem to pile up and homework assignments seem bigger? Well it's not your imagination. Due to the resourcefulness of the schedule planners here on campus they have made winter quarter 1978 the shortest winter quarter in fifteen years. Of course you would expect that the tuition for a shorter quarter would be cheaper. The facilities are used less, the professors teach fewer hours, and thus it costs the school less. But NO we pay the same amount this quarter as last for tuition. That's price discrimination pure and simple. The student senate should check into this. I'd hate to be overcharged, wouldn't you?

$100 too much

Dear Editor:

The rise from $30 to $100 to reserve a dorm room is meant to reduce overflow housing and the number of no-shows; it will accomplish this goal, but at the expense of those students who cannot afford an extra $70 during Spring quarter. Some of these students are high school seniors paying for senior pics, application fees, etc.; some are students who scrounge for funds to pay Spring expenses, much less expenses for next fall.

Glen Lewis has said that loans are available to students in such a financial need. The interest gained on such loans, plus interest gained on deposit fees, are said to be used to lower overall expenses in the dorms. But does the interest on the increased principal proportionally decrease the overall expenses? What really happens to the interest on any deposit fee? Further, why should that extra $70 earn interest for On Campus Living when it could be earning interest for the individual student?

I feel that raising the fee to $100 is not thoroughly justified. Yet, $30 does not seem to effectively reduce the number of no-shows. Therefore, a compromise figure of $50-$60 would reduce no-show numbers and would not put the extreme financial burden on students that $100 would. I urge Student Senate to pressure O.C.L. to lower the dorm deposit fee from $100, at least by next year, in accordance with the limited resources of the average dorm student.

Thanks

To The Editor:

I would like to thank ASMSU Senators Jim Rice and Sparky Walterskirchen for taking their time and interest in representing those of us living in MSU residence halls. We appreciate their efforts in bringing the issue of $100 dorm prepayments to the attention of the other senators and university community. Although Senate was somewhat "hand tied" in dealing with the situation, I would like to thank Jim and Sparky again for initiating action and foreseeing the implications of this new policy. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Nancy Lacock

Exponent: President Carter has just finished his first year in office and polls have shown that his popularity is declining. Why do you think this is happening?

Baucus: Well, I think the honeymoon's over. He's had a year. He is inexperienced in Washington, and it's a tough job being President. In fact I can't think of a tougher job. At the end of one year people are bound to be a little disenchanted, and he's made a few mistakes. However we have three more years left, you know, the final exam will be in three years.

Exponent: How's that going to affect this year's campaigns for the rest of the democrats?

Baucus: I don't think it has much of an effect. I think most Americans, most Montanans, vote individuals rather than parties. They try to decide: Is this a person we like, or a person we don't like? A good example of this phenomenon is the result of the last election in Montana. Gosh, a lot of Montanans voted for Gerald Ford, and a lot of Montanans voted for democratic House and Senate candidates. So that's a good indication that people in Montana pick the man or the woman, rather than the party.

Exponent: What do you feel is the most important issue facing Montana at this time?

Baucus: Agriculture.

Exponent: Does that include the farm strike issue?

Baucus: That's right. I think the farmers strike has helped. It's raised the consciousness of the problem nationwide. Most city folk really don't think about agriculture, but this forces them to think about it a little bit. I hope we can get some results. It's really a matter of bending the ears of eastern congressman and consumer groups in the country so that they begin to realize that we have a problem and we need some help.

Exponent: Some of the southern states are driving to have the MHD program built there, instead of Montana. What can you do to keep it in Montana?

Baucus: Just be more successful than they, just be more effective, more intense, just a better congressman than they are.

Exponent: Another issue facing Montana is water and water rights. How are we going to protect water rights in Montana?

Baucus: Same way. Just be better at it, a better advocate. It also means that we in the west have to stick together. We have the water by and large, but different western states have different attitudes. For example, California, in a sense, is a western state, and California desperately wants Colorado water, in fact, some of the southern Californians are even talking about dreaming a scheme to get some of the Columbia basin water, or the Missouri basin water somehow down to southern California, so that's a problem. But among the Rocky Mountain states we have to stick together, and also remind President Carter if he comes up with a national water program which takes our water, there's no way in the world he's going to get re-elected, in the west anyway.

Exponent: One of the things the late Senator Metcalf seemed very concerned about was conservation in Montana. If you are elected to the Senate, would you carry on his programs for the new wilderness areas?

Baucus: I would do what I think is best for Montana. I'm my own man, my own person; I think that's all one can be in anything, whether one is a United States senator, whether one is a student, whether one is a reporter, whether one is a doctor, whatever the profession may be.

Senator Metcalf fought for what he believed was best for Montana. He worked for some goals that were in fact very good for Montana. But by and large I think that one should pursue what one thinks deep down, fundamentally, is best for the state, because after all that's what it's all about. That's what elections are about, that's what representative government is all about, and that's what I would hope to do.

Bubbles from the fish lab

by The Madison Menace and The Bighole Demon

The five o'clock bells of the university time system rang clearly through the Fish Lab window.

"Well Menace," the Demon said, rising from his desk, "I guess it's about time to head home."

"That sounds good to me," I confirmed, having tired of examining female salmonflies under the microscope all day.

Pulling on our ragged jackets, we left the Fish Lab, heading for our humble basement abode located in the ghetto-like apartment complex affectionately known as Woldsville. Swinging aside the "condemned housing area" sign that served as the door to our subterranean pit, we began the long descent down the crumbling cement stairs.

As we reached the bottom of the stairs and wiped our feet on the crusty brown mat we saw the "Big Burnn" sitting regally on the ragged easy chair, casually spitting tobacco in the general direction of a spittoon, located on the other side of the room.

Just then the Whip breezed in from the kitchen and announced "Dinner is just about ready. We're havin' elk roast and potatoes tonight."

I thought to myself how lucky we were to have such a variety of food for our dinners at Woldsville. Elk and potatoes was a welcome break from the deer and potatoes we'd had the night before, and the antelope and potatoes we'd had the night before that. Just then, our Resident Hippie emerged from his 4 by 6 foot bedroom.

"Wow, really, and for sure!" he exclaimed approvingly, "It sure is nice to have a provider like the Big Burnn to supply meat for the table!"

It was true. The Big Burnn was quite a provider of big game, and had a unique method of doing so. Using his 580 H&H super magnum bazooka, mounted on a wheeled cannon trestle, he'd single-handedly shot enough deer, antelope and elk to fill all of our tags. His hunting method was very efficient. Using handloaded eight-ounce slugs, he could knock down, kill, quarter up and make steaks, roasts and hamburger out of an animal with a single shot.

After consuming our elk and potatoes dinner, we were informed of a special treat by Whip. "You wanna know what else we got to eat? My cheesecake is ready for tonight's dessert!"

"Bring it out," I shouted in anticipated pleasure of the long awaited cake.

Moving the cinder block aside that kept the refrigerator door closed, Whip reached in and hefted out the cheesecake.

"Boy, we gotta defrost this freezer soon!" he complained.

The room suddenly fell into an apprehensive silence. What had once been the freezer compartment was now wholly taken over by a large, fast growing terror that we had come to refer to as the "Ice Monster." Steaks, ice cream and other items had been engulfed by that frightful mass, and we expected that a former roommate we'd had before Whip moved in had met the same fate. We had kept this from Whip, not wishing to scare him.

"Oh, we'll defrost that thing one of these days soon," the Big Burnn cooed, exchanging knowing glances with everyone seated around the table.

Whip then staggered in from the kitchen and hoisted his prize cheesecake onto the dinner table, which promptly collapsed under the massive weight of the thing. After reinforcing the table with 4 by 4's and cinder blocks, we proceeded to cut the cake into portions with a chain saw, after breaking two chisels and an axe on it. After feebly attempting to consume our pieces of the cake, we all assured Whip that we wished to save them for a special occasion and put them in the refrigerator where we hoped the "Ice Monster" would take care of them.

After an exciting after-dinner discussion of our complete incompetence with women, we all headed for our respective bedrooms. As I crawled over the high, rotting pile of dirty clothes blocking my bedroom door, I heard the usual Waltons-type good-night going on. Finally I heard the Big Burnn yell from across the room, "Goodnight John-Boy!"

"Goodnight Big Burnn!" I replied contentedly, thinking of how envious all the people in the dorms would be if they knew of our plush, off-campus lifestyle.

FESTIVENTION '78

The love-hate relationship of King Henry II (Robert Bristol) and Thomas Becket (David Chandler) was the basis of Jean Anouilh's classic play presented by the University of Utah. The turmoil of the two close friends eventually -- through Becket's death -- leads to the unification of England.

Festivention '78 was both a time of education and a time of entertainment for those students and visitors who were fortunate enough to attend. The festival, sponsored by the American College Theatre Festival, the Rocky Mountain Theatre Association and hosted by MSU's Department of Theatre Arts presented work shops in all phases of theatre, as well as four student plays from universities representing Montana, Idaho, Utah and Colorado.

Four plays were presented in competition for the American College Theatre Festival 10, to be held in Washington, D.C. in April. The plays were: "Equus," done by Idaho State University; "Becket" by the University of Utah; "Hedda Gabler", by Mesa College; and "When you comin' back Red Ryder", by the University of Montana.

Theatrical luminaries, Ezra Stone, Gerald Freedman and Robert Hobbs highlighted the event with their knowledgeable and entertaining lecture-demonstrations on various areas of theatre.

Over 300 students, faculty members and professional people attended Festivention which ran from Jan. 25 to Jan. 28. Among the other events were the competitions for scenic design and costume design at both graduate and undergraduate levels and the selection of the regional winner of the Irene Ryan Scholarship Award.

Workshops were offered ranging from make-up, through stage combats to technical lighting and scenery construction.

"The Marathon"

Classic race captured

"The Marathon" is a dramatic film that captures this classic race from start to finish. It highlights the experience of the 69 elite runners who tied for three Olympic berths at the Olympic Marathon Trials in Eugene, Ore. This exciting film features the voices of Frank Shorter, Bill Rodgers and Don Kardong as they recount their races. Slow motion segments dramatically depict the form, grace, muscular effort and style of America's top marathoners.

"The greatest film ever on the marathon!" This was one of the many exciting comments heard as thousands of runners viewed "The Marathon" at the 1977 Boston Marathon.

"The Marathon" is produced by Marlin Darrah for Runner's World of World Publications. It can be seen on Wednesday, Feb. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in Room 215 of the Architecture Building in the Creative Arts Complex at MSU. The film is sponsored by the Big Sky Wind Drinkers. Admission to the film is free and the entire Bozeman community is welcome to attend.

"Close Encounters" group to meet again

The second of a series of six discussions, entitled "CLOSE ENCOUNTERS: Love, Sex and Marriage," will be held at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 2, in Room 1-110 of Wilson Hall on the MSU campus.

A panel, consisting of three MSU faculty members and one graduate student, will lead this week's session on "The Different Sexual Expectations of Males and Females."

The panelists are Sue Sindelar, a graduate student in education; Peggy Leiterman-Stock, an assistant dean of student affairs; Robert Lind, an associate professor of home economics; and Dick Horswill, an associate professor of educational services.

The non-credit series, is free and open to the public.

ASMSU senate position open

Applications are now being accepted for the ASMSU student senator spot that was vacated last week by the resignation of Steve Vick. The deadline for the applications is 5 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 8. The position will be filled at the Feb. 9 senate meeting.

The newly appointed senator will serve out the rest of Vick's term, which expires Apr. 21. Applications are available at the senate office during regular office hours.

Swingle Health Service provides MSU with medical care

The Swingle Student Health Service provides outpatient care to all registered MSU students. Emergency service is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and regular office hours are from 8-11:30 a.m., and 1-5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The health service is financed entirely by student fees. The $18 health fee included in registration fees for each quarter covers everything except the use of the pharmacy, the services provided at the family planning clinic and a few of the lab tests. The charge for prescriptions is wholesale plus about 50 cents and the students are free to use the pharmacy for prescriptions ordered by their private physicians. The cost for family planning services is also considerably less than for that provided by a local practitioner.

Students who can't pay the additional costs may write an IOU or make other arrangements with the health service. When possible, doctors will provide sample medications for those students.

The health service is staffed with five full-time MD's, including one internist, three family practitioners and one surgeon. The health service also includes six full-time registered nurses, one half-time psychiatrist and one half-time clinical psychologist, one registered pharmacist, two full-time medical technicians and five work-study students.

Students are covered from the first day of each quarter until the last day of the last day of the quarter, but not during vacation periods. The health service does not perform physical exams required before acceptance to MSU, but will do physicals on students who need them for summer employment.

The health service provides many services they range from treatment of minor colds to minor surgery; a variety of tests, including those for pregnancy and venereal diseases; immunizations; psychiatric counseling; and emergency care.

The health service would like to hear from the MSU students concerning health care at MSU. Please fill out the questionnaire provided at the SUB, the health service and in all the dorms.

Female cagers lose to UM

Coming back from a loss to the UM JV team, 51-50, the junior Catwomen will attempt to outscore the Butte Tech Orediggers here Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. In the UM game, behind the scoring of Jacque Jensen and Nancy Feeback, the 'Cats were able to rally back from a 23-16 halftime deficit, but were unable to break the ice in the final seconds for the victory.

Laramie tourney...

Wrestlers finish last

by Pat Kearney

With a young team the Montana State grapplers gained plenty of valuable experience this past weekend in the Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament held in Laramie, Wyo.

The Bobcats finished in 15th place out of 15 teams, but with 8 out of 12 of the MSU wrestlers being freshmen, this tournament marked probably the biggest and toughest wrestling tournament they have encountered since coming to Bozeman.

Brigham Young won the tournament with Northern Colorado in second place and Utah State placing third.

Montana State managed to get three points. Joe Olmstead at 134 pounds took one point on advancement and another on a pin. Bill Romine at 190 pounds got the other point on an advancement.

This weekend the wrestlers will be home for their first matches in Bozeman since late December. The Bobcats will grapple with the University of Montana in a duel meet Saturday in the MSU Fieldhouse beginning at 2 p.m.

Screaming Eagles
crop Catwomen

Thursday night in Cheney, Wash., the Eastern Washington University screaming Eagles cropped the hopes of the MSU Catwomen by defeating them, 76-72. Though MSU opened the game with a full court press and scored the initial baskets, EWU chipped away at the lead and eventually overtook the Cats.

Robin Hutton and Pam Hansen scored their best games of the season, each contributing 24 points. Hansen fouled out with only two minutes remaining -- her absence definitely affected the remaining Catwomen. Hansen is the only senior school record in the two-mile relay with a time of 10:21.1.

Janice Shaver, Lynda Kirk, Annie Voss and Kathy Redfield set a record in the 880 relay covering the distance in 1:53.9. Shaver, Mary Pinkerton, Allen and Gallup set a new school mark in the mile relay at 4:15.4.

Pam Heitzmann had a fine individual performance by winning the high jump with a leap of 5-2. Heitzmann placed in the long jump also by finishing fifth.

Carla Heintz did well by finishing second in the pentathlon with 2,619 points. Heintz won all events except the high jump where she scratched and did not score any points. Her scratch proved costly because it enabled Idaho State's Elaine Shermann to pass her and win the event with 3,198 points.

among the inexperienced group of frosh and sophomores. Joyce Bignell and Jennifer Robb were also cited by Coach Susan Miller as putting forth outstanding efforts.

Saturday night in the cross-state rivalry with UM, the Catwomen couldn't put it all together and lost to the Grizzlies, 69-60. Kammy Unruh played an outstanding game, pulling down 17 rebounds and putting in 14 points. Also praised for their hustle and drivers were Dara Reimers and Maggie McDonald. The Cats were able to release more attempts to the basket than UM, but attempts is what they remained -- MSU shot only 36 per cent from the floor, while UM tallied a shining 49 per cent.

Looking for a victory, the Catwomen resume non-conference action this weekend when they will host the Flathead Valley Mountaineers Friday at 5:15 p.m., and the EMC Yellowjackets Saturday at 10 a.m. Both games will be played in the Fieldhouse, admission is free.

Senate report

Senators discuss dorm prepayment, student regent

by Melinda McFeely

The recent dorm fee prepayment increase was the main issue of last Thursday's student senate meeting. Students desiring to live in the dorm next year will now be required to pay a $100 deposit, instead of the previous amount of $30. Also, the deadline for receiving refunds has moved up to Aug. 1 from Sept. 1.

Glen Lewis, from the On Campus Living Office, was present to explain the reasons for these policy changes. He said the purpose of the $100 prepayment is to decrease the number of people who don't show up, and neither call nor write to cancel their room reservations.

The number of such no-shows has been steadily increasing over the last few years, last fall's total was more than 700.

Lewis pointed out that a student can get a short-term loan from the Financial Aid Office without much difficulty, and for a very low rate of interest.

The reason for the Aug. 1 cancellation deadline is to give those who find out they definitely won't be able to get a room time to find an apartment or another school to attend. September is usually too late to find either, he said.

The major complaints from the senators and other students are that they didn't feel they were consulted or informed before this decision was made, and that the policy should have been announced the year before it was to go into effect, not the same year. Students who want to live in the dorm next year now have only a few months to come up with a 100 dollars, when they were planning to need only $30 dollars.

Another subject discussed was extension of library hours. Money has been budgeted to extend hours for a trial period of about five weeks. This will go into effect in February, after the student senate has hired one professional librarian and several other people to fill the necessary positions for the extra hours.

These extended hours will be:

--Five extra hours on Sunday - from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and from 10:45 to 11:45 p.m.

--One extra hour Monday through Thursday - from 10:45 to 11:45 p.m.

--Four extra hours Friday and Saturday from 4:45 to 8:45 p.m.

--Total - 17 hours per week.

If this trial period is successful, money will hopefully be available to continue the extended hours.

MSU's Board of Regents candidate was selected Thursday night. Each year the governor selects a student from the Montana university system to serve a one-year term on the Board of Regents. Each school in the system may send up to three representatives. Out of these representatives, the governor picks one. Senate decided to send one candidate. Karl Seel was the final choice. Seel is a senior economics major from Bozeman. He plans to attend law school in Missoula next year.

Cats bow to Gonzaga, Idaho

The Montana State Bobcats entrenched themselves at the bottom of the Big Sky standings by losing twice over the weekend. On Friday the Cats fell to league leading Gonzaga, 91-76, and on Saturday the Bobcats were dumped by the Idaho Vandals, 91-84.

A five-minute defensive lapse by the Bobcats in the second half of their game on Friday night proved costly, as Gonzaga went from a 60-56 lead to a 72-60 lead with only five minutes to play in the game.

The league-leading Zags were led in their big surge in the second half by Harold Brown who pumped in 10 points in the final 10 minutes of the game. Brown led the Zags in scoring with 23 points.

Montana State stayed fairly close to Gonzaga until the midway point in the first half when Gonzaga built up an 11-point lead at 27-16. The Zags held on to the 11-point lead until late in the half when the Cats cut the lead down to four points at 38-34 with three minutes left before intermission. Gonzaga held off the Cats and led at the half, 43-36.

Gonzaga built up a 13-point lead at 58-45 six minutes into the second half. MSU caught fire behind Craig Finberg and Stu Dodds and in the next four minutes they cut the lead down to 60-56 with 10 minutes to play. That was as close as the Zags dared to let MSU get. The Zags completely out-gunned the Cats in the final 10 minutes to register their fifth straight Big Sky win.

Finberg once again led Montana State in scoring by throwing in 33 points. It marks the seventh time this year Finberg has topped the 30-point mark.

Dodds also had a fine game. Dodds, playing in his home town for the first time since his high school days at Ferris High, got 16 points.

On Saturday night MSU moved south to Moscow, Idaho, for an encounter with the Idaho Vandals. Before the game neither team had won a game in Big Sky action. After the game only the Bobcats could say they have not won in the Big Sky because the Vandals won, 91-84.

The win by the Vandals marks their first win at home this year over a Big Sky foe. Before the Montana State game the Vandals had lost to five different Big Sky teams on the Vandals' home floor of the Kibbie Dome.

The loss dropped the Bobcats record to 0-6 in the Big Sky and 6-11 overall. Idaho is now 1-5 in the Big Sky with an impressive 4-12 mark overall.

Idaho led throughout the game holding a 40-33 lead at the half. The Bobcats moved to within one point at 46-45 with 14 minutes to play in the game. The Idaho lead stayed at one point until, with a 50-49 lead, the Vandals ran off 12 unanswered points to put the game out of reach.

The Vandals were led in scoring by Reed Jaussi who had an outstanding game getting 30 points. Dan Forte came off the Idaho bench to nail in 21 points in the Vandals' win.

Montana State was led by Finberg and Dodds who each netted 19 points. Freshmen Lance Freeman played well by getting 17 points, 14 of which came in the second half.

The Bobcats this weekend can only think of revenge as they will host Gonzaga on Friday night in the MSU Fieldhouse and Idaho on Saturday night. Both games will start at 8 p.m.

Craig Finberg produced more points than any other Bobcat last weekend. It was not enough, however as the MSU cagers fell into the Big Sky cellar.

Shot down again...

Rifle team falls

by Oley Sheremeta

The Montana State University Rifle Team was defeated for the second time this year at the 19th Annual Bengal Trophy Match at Idaho State University in Pocatello, Idaho.

On Saturday, Jan. 28, the Cats saw their league lead slip from 70 points to 23 points in the "A" team category, while the "B" team now trails the University of Wyoming by 9 points in League standings.

The Cat "A" team fired a score of 2,158 out of 2,400 to finish in third place, behind the University of Utah Navy's 2,212 and the University of Wyoming's 2,206. The Cat "B" team fired a score of 2,100 to finish in second place behind Wyoming's 2,122. The MSU Army ROTC Team fired a score of 1,045 out of 1,200.

The Bobcats captured the team prone trophy with a score of 789 out of 800, the team kneeling trophy with a score of 757 out of 800 and the third place overall trophy with their score of 2,158.

Individual winners were: Guyle Guderian who won the high ROTC prone trophy with a score of 199 out of 200 and the high standing ROTC trophy with a score of 175 out of 200. Russ Hunnewell finished second in the prone match with a perfect score of 200 with 12 X's, being defeated by Brigham Young University's Terrie Kenyon who fired a 200 with 13 X's. In the overall aggregate, Guderian placed seventh with a score of 552 out of 600, Clark placed ninth with 546 and Pile placed tenth with 545 in this field of nearly 80 competitors.

Individual efforts for the "A" team were: Guyle Guderian, 552 out of 600, followed by Mac Clark, 546, Jim Pile, 545 and Russ Hunnewell, 515. The "B" team was led by Lynn Castlemann, a returning shooter from the MSU 1973 Women's National Record setting team who fired a 542 out of 600 followed by Norm Comfort, 533, Bill Reid, 516 and Oley Sheremeta, 509. The Army ROTC Team was led by Guderian who fired a 282 out of 300 followed by Pile, 269, Sheremeta, 253 and Jackson 241. Alternate shooters were Gary Jackson, 485, Joann Heinzmann 484, and Leta Brown 421.

Gallup gallops to record

by Pat Kearney

Like their male counterparts, last weekend the women's track team started their 1978 indoor season with a fine effort placing third in a six-team meet in the Minidome in Pocatello, Idaho.

The University of Saskatchewan and tough Brigham Young tied for first place with 116 points. MSU was third with 78 points. Following the Bobcats were Idaho State with 61, Utah with 18 and Boise State with 15 points.

The highlight for the Bobcat women was a school record set by Julie Gallup of 60.7 in the 440 yard dash. In addition to Gallup's school record all three relay teams set new school marks in their races.
