How many of us dread that inevitable phone call that starts off something like this: “Can you come and give a presentation to my class of 100 7th graders tomorrow?” Do those words strike fear in your heart? You need not feel out there all alone. Help is just a phone call away. Biologists and specialists are often called upon to provide presentations for school groups and service organizations. Your presentation can be made much easier and more effective with a variety of tools, tips and props at your disposal. This presentation will discuss and show examples of these tools and provide resource lists for your use.
