The climate crisis presents unprecedented challenges to the wildlife profession, as it does for all of humanity. Does the human animal have the capacity to wrap its mind around it? This poster is an attempt to convey and inspire individual thoughts about the climate crisis where words in scientific or popular literature may fail us, and from individual thoughts may arise actions and initiative beyond our experience. For actions beyond our experience are required of those who strive to make a difference, and of others who would hope to support, rather than impede, their efforts. So, we hope that the visual image of this poster will speak to someone for whom words are not as impactful.
